A gift in your Will is a gift to future generations facing crisis.

For over 125 years, the Canadian Red Cross has been helping people in crisis. Thanks to the support of Canadian donors, we will continue to be there for decades to come.

When people include a gift in their Will to the Red Cross, their generosity will become food, shelter, or much-needed comfort to people facing future crises here in Canada and around the world.

Leave a lasting legacy of humanitarian support with the Canadian Red Cross. Access our free resources including a Will Planning Guide, Legacy Brochure, and Will Wording samples.

Including The Princess Margaret in my Will was an easy decision, and I hope my foresight and openness will motivate other folks to consider making the same pledge.”

— Jane Leckey, Cancer Survivor

After surviving cancer twice, Jane Leckey decided she wanted to give back to the organization that helped save her life. By leaving a gift to The Princess Margaret Cancer Foundation in her Will, she's ensuring that her legacy will help advance life-saving cancer research and care for generations to come. You can improve future patient outcomes too by leaving a gift to The Princess Margaret Cancer Foundation in your Will.

Dear Colleague:

On behalf of the Canadian Bar Association, we congratulate the publisher of the Canadian Donor's Guide on this thirty-ninth edition of the publication. The Canadian Donor's Guide continues to be a useful service for our members and for the many worthy charities seeking contributions.

Once again, the Canadian Donor's Guide is being provided free of charge to lawyers and notaries who are members of the Canadian Bar Association's Wills, Estates & Trusts Section, Charities and Not-for-Profit Law Section, Taxation Law Section and the Small, Solo and General Practice Section.

We are sure you will agree that the Canadian Donor's Guide is a useful source of information for your practice. It provides clients with up-to-date information and insight about a variety of worthwhile causes to support. It is also an important resource for you to refer to when assisting clients in your practice area.

Please note that the publisher of the Canadian Donor's Guide does not certify that all charities featured in the Guide are duly registered with the Canada Revenue Agency. You are therefore advised to verify charitable status with the Canada Revenue Agency as you deem appropriate.

We hope you will enjoy this year's guide.

Sincerely,

Chère collègue,
Cher collègue,

Au nom de l'Association du Barreau canadien, nous félicitons l'éditeur du Guide des donateurs aux organismes de charité du Canada pour son ce trente- neuvième édition, que nos membres et les organismes de charité sollicitant des dons continuent de trouver très utile.

Une fois de plus, nous offrons ce Guide gratuitement aux juristes et notaires, membres de la Section des testaments, successions et fiducies, de la Section des organismes de bienfaisance et à but non lucratif, de la Section du droit fiscal et du Forum des juristes exerçant en petits cabinets, seuls ou en pratique générale, de l'Association du Barreau canadien.

Nous sommes convaincus que ce Guide sera une excellente source de renseignements pour votre cabinet. Il procure des renseignements à jour et un aperçu d'une vaste gamme de causes dignes d'intérêt que vos clients peuvent choisir d'appuyer. Il fournit également une importante ressource que vous pouvez consulter lorsque vous aidez des clients dans votre pratique.

Veuillez noter que l'éditeur du Guide des donateurs aux organismes de charité du Canada ne certifie pas que tous les organismes de bienfaisance inscrits dans le Guide sont dûment enregistrés auprès de l'Agence du revenu du Canada. Nous vous conseillons de vérifier le statut d'organisme de bienfaisance auprès de l'Agence du revenu du Canada, le cas échéant.

Nous espérons que vous apprécierez le guide de cette année.

Nous vous prions d'agréer, chère collègue, cher collègue, l'expression de nos sentiments les meilleurs.

PUBLISHER'S NOTE

The nicest people...

Welcome to the 39th edition of the Canadian Donor's Guide – your authoritative annual directory of fundraising organizations in Canada. I am honoured to provide you with this comprehensive reference resource and related editorial content to assist with your respective responsibilities in the planned giving environment.

We continue to deliver more than 17,000 copies of our publication to key decision makers and professional advisors in Canada's donor community. This would not be possible without the relationships the Canadian Donor's Guide shares with the Canadian Association of Gift Planners (CAGP), the Canadian Bar Association, STEP Canada and Imagine Canada. Their support and commitment to our efforts is truly appreciated. In addition, we could not provide this Guide without the many charitable organizations across Canada who put their trust in us to bring their messages to their key audience – those charities who purchase advertising in our pages.

This is the opportunity I take each year to look back over the time since our last edition and to review some of the things happening in the charitable sector in Canada.

When I saw the job posting of the previous publisher, Anderson Charters, I was drawn to the position because Anderson noted that we would be working with the nicest people across Canada. I am very happy I applied for that role and was hired for the position back in 2007, which started me on the path to becoming the publisher of this valued publication.

Indeed, Anderson was right, I get to work with the nicest people across this country, who are all doing good works. The CAGP conference last Spring brought many of those people together in Ottawa. We got to meet old friends again, meet some of the friends we have previously only known digitally and to meet new friends. It is only a few days but it feels like a lifetime of memories are made at this annual conference. The 2024 theme was Convergence of Generosity. It was a fitting theme. We would like to thank the CAGP, its staff members, board members and all of the volunteers who worked together to host this incredible event.

Within the pages of this edition of the Canadian Donor's Guide we have the words of Malcolm Burrows who shares his thoughts about the Foundation Perpetuity Myth. Malcolm states that foundations are flexible and evolve over time and that emphasis should be on philanthropic responsiveness and finding the right balance between current and future community needs.

Thank you to Adam Aptowitzer, of KPMG Law, for his updated advice about charitable donations from a tax perspective.

This edition contains a plethora of information about wills and estate planning including an article from law clerk,

Alison Stoneman
Publisher, Canadian Donor's Guide

Sandra Arsenault, from Fasken Martineau DuMoulin, LLP, who provides an overview of the role of an executor of a Will and what a job posting for the position might look like if it existed.

Sandra L. Pierce, known as the Bag Lady of Bay Street, brings us advice about how we can ensure our four-legged family members are assured of being properly taken care of when we pass. Sandra urges us to include provisions for our pets in our estate plans. Sandra's advice has me thinking that my husband and I need to do that for our Murphy dog.

Will Power has provided us with information about leaving a donation to charity in our wills and, in fact, there is power in leaving a donation to charity in our Will. Give this article a read for some valuable information.

Ian Hull, co-founder of Hull & Hull, LLP, is back in this edition giving us information and guidance about how secondary or multiple Wills in an estate might be dealt with by the court.

There are two articles about conservation within our editorial section for this edition. From our friends at World Wildlife Fund Canada (WWF-Canada) we learn of the technological tools that are being used to provide the opportunity to track and monitor polar bears. This will help researchers understand how polar bears are faring and assist with learning how to manage and conserve these incredible Arctic animals. The researchers are using some unique ways to learn from these bears without having much direct contact with them and ways that are less intrusive to these incredible animals.

The second article on conservation is brought to you by Nature Conservancy Canada (NCC). Jeremy Hogan, the director of Prairie Grassland Conservation, who has been in awe of the massive expanse of grasslands in our prairie region since he was a child, educates us about the grasslands that he describes are workhorses for our land, our people and play an important role in agriculture. These grasslands are among the most endangered ecosystems in the world. Jeremy shares information about the work NCC is doing to care for and conserve these grasslands and states that they need “everyone at the table to help to ensure their future”.

We have included an article written by Duke Chang, President and CEO of CanadaHelps, who brings us information from The Giving Report about trends taking place in Canada. One of these trends is that our connections and social bonds with each other are contracting, which, in turn, is changing how we engage with the world around us. Comparisons are given between charitable giving and how many friends a person has is quite enlightening. Advice for charities to fight these trends is explored.

Reprinted from the Canadian Bar Association's National Magazine is an article about steps to reconciliation beyond land acknowledgements. Information from the firm McCarthy Tétrault in Toronto and MLT Aikins LLP from Western Canada on how they are making steps to prioritize education and work with Indigenous communities to develop relationships in a meaningful way.

There are 3 inspiring profiles included from the Salvation Army, the War Amps and the Terry Fox Foundation.

From the Salvation Army we learn about Nicole, who went from living in her car, needing assistance, to where she is today as the manager for a Salvation Army Thrift Store.

From the Terry Fox Foundation we are inspired by Owen's story, a young man who is heading off to university at the time of this writing as a cancer survivor, who now tries not to “sweat the small stuff” and practices random acts of kindness.

The War Amps shares the story of Chris Koch, who was born without both arms and legs, but always managed to figure out a way to do the things he wanted to do with the support of his family and from The War Amps Child Amputee (CHAMP) program. Chris says he is just a “regular dude” but take a good read of this article to find out how inspiring this regular dude really is.

The final inclusion is a postscript from the publisher. It is my tribute to a valued, long-time friend of the Canadian Donor's Guide, Paul Nazareth, who has started a new path, a desire path.

Thank you again for your dedicated support of the Canadian Donor's Guide as a valued resource. If you have suggestions, ideas or questions, feel free to contact me directly. May this Guide always be helpful in your endeavours to easily and effectively match donors with charities.

Please know that I am thinking of all of the nicest people across Canada. Those that are working hard on behalf of charities in all communities, from the largest to the smallest. And those people supporting those charities with their time, their money and their planned gifts, leaving a legacy. I am also thinking about the nicest people who are advisors to those doing their financial and estate planning. I thank you all for continuing to do what you do.

The Foundation Perpetuity Myth

The philanthropic community has a perpetuity obsession. Critics of perpetuity believe that preserving capital, restricting payout, and existing forever is the pernicious norm. Admittedly, for some foundations, perpetuity a sacred ideal, an aspiration that is sometimes unquestioned. Foundations that “spend-down” are valorized as rare entities that value community impact over capital. But the reality is more complex. There is a long history of foundations that aren’t perpetual, and in Canada they are now, arguably, in the majority.

Perpetuity – A Legal Default

Perpetuity is a compelling legal concept. In the past the term was routinely used in gift agreements and charity founding documents without being properly thought through. How long, exactly, is perpetuity? Really, can property last forever without degrading? For many years perpetual was a word that was used as a legal default in charitable trusts. It is an aspiration, but also routinely used precedent language. A legal habit. And “habit”, as Samuel Beckett said, “is the ballast that chains a dog to its vomit”. (Just try to get that image out of your mind.)

The concept of perpetuity is medieval in origins and was encoded in trust law. Capital was land. It was held to produce income to pay for good works. While traditionally trusts for private benefit were time limited, charitable trusts could be perpetual to provide long-term, future benefit. Perpetuity, or permanence, reflects an aristocratic world view. Politically, there is an encoded message of stability and continuity. Which may partly explain the reaction to the idea of perpetuity today by some critics.

Is perpetuity the norm?

I believe that perpetuity is not the norm among Canadian foundations, at least in practice. A high percentage of private foundations are annual, flow-through entities. Others became “perpetual” because the pre-2010 10-year gift language in the Income Tax Act but aren’t being managed for perpetuity. Some are time limited, or spend-downs. Still others never get going or run out of steam. They either get revoked by CRA or apply for voluntary revocation.

The CRA charities database tells a story of foundation mortality, not perpetuity. Private foundations often have a limited life. As of July 2024, there have been 10,312 private foundations registered since 1967, and 3,476 or one-third are revoked and no longer exist. There are 6,836 are still registered, and 3,357 or 49% are less than 15 years old.

Headline Examples

Foundations with public, limited durations are, however, getting headlines.

Malcolm Burrows
Head of Philanthropic Advisory Services at Scotia Wealth Management

One example is the 70-year-old Ivey Foundation, which announced it was spending down its $100 million endowment in five years “to enhance its efforts to advance Canada’s net-zero economy and increase the capabilities of the Foundation’s core partners on the front lines of Canada’s climate and energy transition.” This is bold and responsive, but it is not by any means the only example of Canadian spend-down foundation.

A new and large private foundation in Canada is The Waltons Trust, which is a self-described “limited life grant-making foundation”. It was founded by David Graham, the former owner of the cable company, Cablecasting that was sold to be bigger rival 20 years ago. Mr. Graham died in 2017 with no children. The foundation now has over $100 million and is run by trusted friends and associates.

Quiet examples

But not all Canadian examples are as public, and some are even larger. Aqueduct Foundation has a $180 million spend-down fund that is quietly granting to zero. The R. Samuel McLaughlin Foundation, established by the founder of General Motors in Canada, granted out $100 million dollars in the early 2000s. Its founder had placed a 50-year sunset deadline on the entity. It quietly granted all its capital and closed shop.

CHARITABLE DONATIONS

A Summary of Tax Considerations

INTRODUCTION

It is a peculiar result of history that regulation of charities in Canada is part of the Income Tax Act (ITA). One of the unintended consequences of this placement is that the regulation of charities fits primarily within an income tax context. So, donations are incentivized using income tax mechanisms and sanction against charities is framed as the revocation of the special status that provides charities with their umbrella of privileges. This means that both charities and their supporters cannot fully understand their options for supporting a particular charitable aim without understanding the incentives of donating to charity and the limitations in charitable operations.

QUALIFIED DONEES

It bears mentioning that government has extended the benefits given to charities to certain other entities known as qualified donees. They include:

- Registered Canadian amateur athletic associations;
- Certain organizations that provide low-cost housing for the aged;
- Most municipalities;
- Certain municipal or public bodies performing a function of government in Canada;
- Registered national arts service organizations;

- Certain foreign charities that have received a gift from the federal government;
- The federal and provincial governments;
- The United Nations and its agencies; and,
- Registered journalism organizations.

INCENTIVES

As the incentives for donating are primarily tax-based, one should have a basic understanding of the tax system to appreciate the value of the inducement. There are two fundamental aspects of Canada's tax system to keep in mind. The first is that Canadians are taxed progressively. That is, the first chunk of income (a bracket) is taxed at a low percentage, the next chunk at a higher rate and so on. The second rule to understand is that – after a Canadian adds up their entire income – there are certain subtractions that are made that reduce the total amount of tax that is paid to the government.

Those that are made prior to the application of the tax rate are called deductions; those that are made after are called credits.

Tax donations are treated as either donations or credits depending upon who makes the donation. If the donations are made by corporations, the donor entity can deduct the amount of the donation from its income prior to the application of the appropriate tax rate(s) to its income bracket(s). On the other hand, when donations are made by individuals, the amount of the donation is multiplied by the appropriate federal percentage and deducted from federal tax and the same procedure is conducted in each province at their rates. The product of these calculations is then deducted from the tax owing.

Adam Aptowitzer

The tax credit itself is determined by multiplying the first $200 by the lowest combined federal/provincial rate in the appropriate province (except Alberta) and multiplying everything over $200 by the designated rate (in most Canadian jurisdictions the highest provincial rate (and federally it is either the highest (33%) or second-highest (29%) depending on the circumstances of the donor). The table on the next page (Table A, page 11) illustrates the tax credits available for donations of $1,200 in the different provinces.

As most Canadians are not subject to Alternative Minimum Tax, the discussion below assumes the more typical taxing situation. And, to simplify the discussion, we will make two assumptions. First, unless otherwise stated, the donor holds the items to be donated as capital property. Second, we will assume a credit rate of 46 per cent.

DONATIONS OF CASH

Donations of cash are straightforward. The charity simply receipts the face value of the amount donated. (This does not apply to currency held for collection purposes). Depending on the province and the donor's tax bracket, the tax credits generated from the donation would offset the tax owing on the income earned, so no tax would be payable on the money earned and then donated. At lower income brackets, and in Alberta, the credits would actually be more than offset by the tax owing and the donor would be able to shelter other income from tax with the credits earned from this donation. If the donor is donating cash that is not income to them in the year donating, the credit could be used to offset taxes owing from other sources. But, in those provinces where the tax rate is higher than the credit rate on donations, the donor could still be paying tax on a dollar given to charity!

PUBLIC SECURITIES

Canada levies tax on the appreciation in value of a capital good. The tax is levied when the item is disposed of (i.e. sold, given away, or donated).

However, the ITA does contain an exemption for publicly listed securities (on certain exchanges) donated to charity.

Moreover, the donor continues to receive a donation tax receipt equal to the fair market value of the shares donated. Thus, there is no tax on the donation, but the donor still receives a tax credit equal to the fair market value of the donation.

While shares of publicly traded corporations are the most popular form of security to be donated to charity, there are a variety of other sophisticated financial securities that may also be donated.

Examples include exchange-traded funds, index funds, hedge funds, warrants, rights, and put and call options. If these products qualify as publicly traded securities, they will qualify for the special tax treatment accorded donations of this type.

Example:

Assume that Kirk lives in Ontario and buys one share of a high-tech company for one dollar ($1). Over time, the share rises in value and may even split once or more than once. After ten years, with all splits factored in, Kirk owns shares worth a total of $100. If Kirk were to sell the share, he would have a capital gain of $99 (i.e. the fair market value of $100, less the cost of $1). Applying a capital gains inclusion rate of 50% (as opposed to 66% if the gain were greater than $250,000), only $47.50 would be taxable. Further applying a tax rate of 46%, the amount of tax payable would be $21.85. Thus, if Kirk sells the shares, he is left with after-tax income of $78.15 (i.e. $100 - $21.85).

Conversely, let's say Kirk decides he wants to donate his shares instead of selling them. In this case, Kirk has no tax to pay and, of course, receives no income from the sale of the share. He does however receive a tax receipt for $100, which (ignoring the lower credit rate for the first $200) will offset $46 of taxes due from other sources. So, assuming Kirk is paying tax on income from other sources, the actual after-tax cost of this donation is $54.

FLOW-THROUGH SHARES

For income tax purposes, the cost of a flow-through share is deemed to be zero. So, even if the buyer buys the share at $10.00 and sells it at $8.00, the share is still assumed to have gained $8.00 in value and is therefore taxed on an $8.00 capital gain even though it actually lost $2.00. (Don't worry about the share-holder though; ownership of the share gave them access to a deduction making it worthwhile). Flow-through shares are like any other asset and can be donated to charity. When these shares are publicly traded, there is no tax on the capital gain. However, for purposes of donation, the law considers the amount of the purchase price to be a capital gain and only the amount in excess of that (if there is any) to be eligible for the capital gains exemption.

STOCK OPTIONS

An employee who exercises a stock option (i.e. buys it at less than fair market value) receives a benefit equal to the difference between the purchase price (and any amounts they may have paid for the option) and the fair market value at the time of purchase. Tax is calculated based on the amount of this benefit which is added into income. Depending on overall income and capital gains, the

Province	Combined Federal / Provincial Tax Credit Rate on first $200 donation	Tax Credit	Combined Federal / Provincial Tax Credit Rate on amounts over $200 ²	Tax Credit on amount over $200	Total combined Federal and Provincial Tax Credit
Alberta ³	75.00%	$150.00	50.00%	$500.00	$650.00

Table A - Tax Credit on $1,200 in donations for 2024

employee can claim a deduction against the stock option benefit so only 50% of the benefit is taxable up to $250,000 and after that only 33%. If an employee stock option is exercised and marketable securities are donated within 30 days after the option is exercised, and if certain other conditions are met, only 25% of the benefit is taxable. If the shares are traded on a public exchange, then their donation is treated as the donation of other publicly listed shares as described previously.

PRIVATE SECURITIES

The donation of securities of private corporations is dealt with in one of two ways; either the gifts are “excepted” or they are not. An excepted gift is a share donated to a charitable organization or public foundation where the donor deals at arm’s length with the charity’s directors/trustees, officers and other like officials. In these circumstances the gift is treated as any other gift of capital in which there is no special tax treatment for the donation (i.e. the donor pays tax on the disposition).

In cases where the gift has been donated to a private foundation or to a public charity to which the donor is related, the gift is not considered “made” until one of two things happen: either the item donated must cease to be a non-qualifying security (e.g. the corporation is no longer controlled by the donor or the corporation becomes publicly listed) or the charity has disposed of the security within five years of receiving the donation. The fair market value of the gift is then the lesser of:

- the value of the security when transferred to the charity,
- and the value of the security when the gift is deemed to have been made.

Note that the donor does not have to include any capital gain in their income before the shares are sold by the charity, so that the donor is not paying tax in advance of receiving the receipt. If the charity does not sell the shares within five years, the donor will not receive a receipt and the gain will never be taxable.

RRSPs/RRIFs

People may find that they have more than enough money in their RRSPs once they get to a certain age and are willing to make donations in their lifetime to see the fruits of those donations while they are still alive. The RRSP rules do allow for withdrawals from the plan but, upon withdrawal, the institution that holds the account (usually a bank) is required to withhold certain amounts. These amounts on a per withdrawal basis (i.e., not cumulatively for the year) are:

- 10% (5% in Québec) on withdrawals up to $5,000;
- 20% (10% in Québec) on withdrawals between $5,001 and $15,000; and,
- 30% (15% in Québec) on withdrawals of more than $15,000.

The amounts withdrawn are claimed as income to the owner of the RRSP in the year withdrawn and tax is paid at the owner’s marginal rate. Thus, if a potential donor wants to donate $50,000 and has that money in his or her RRSP, a withdrawal of $50,000 would give the potential donor outside of Québec $35,000 cash to donate. The remaining 30 per cent ($15,000 in this case) would be remitted to the government by the bank and credited as income tax already paid when the donor files his or her tax return for that year.

A donor may also wish to donate his or her RRSP or RRIF upon death. There are two ways to do this. One way is to list the charity as a beneficiary of the RRSP in the donor’s Will. The other way is to make use of the direct beneficiary election, which is signed when the RRSP is first opened (and can usually be changed at will). If the first method is used, the RRSP will fall into the donor’s general estate before passing on to the charity. Under the second method, the RRSP will automatically become the property of the charity without going through the estate.

The advantage of using the RRSP direct beneficiary election is that the RRSP will not pass through probate. When a Will is probated, the various provinces charge different amounts of tax on the total value of assets passed on in the Will. Thus, the amount of money in an RRSP is added to the other assets and a portion is taken by the government before any of the assets are passed on.

INSURANCE

Sometimes an insurance policy becomes superfluous. If the policy is unnecessary, the donor may decide to donate it to charity.

From a tax perspective, the donor of a life insurance policy will have an income inclusion of the proceeds of disposition less the adjusted cost base (ACB). An income inclusion is distinct from a capital gain and effectively means that a donation of an insurance policy has no net tax benefit for the donor. The ACB calculation is rather complicated and considers the premiums paid, dividends received, and – for policies purchased after 1982 – the Net Cost of Pure Insurance (NCPI). Despite the ominous name, the NCPI is not overly difficult to calculate, although it will likely require professional advice from either an experienced advisor or the insurance company involved.

In a February 2008 bulletin— and later in another setting — the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) laid down certain guidelines for determining the Fair Market Value of a disposed-of policy. In these pronouncements, the calculation of the proceeds of disposition (POD) of an insurance policy considers:

- the policy’s loan value;
- the face value of the policy;
- the state of health of the insured and their life expectancy;
- conversion privileges;
- other policy terms, such as term riders, double indemnity provisions; and,
- replacement value.

The idea here is that the value of a policy may or may not be accurately reflected by any cash surrender value held by the policy. When valuing the policy for both tax and receipting purposes, the donor and the charity must take into account the fact that the donor may be very ill and the policy may mature shortly after donation. A policy that would otherwise be impossible to receipt would become valuable to the donor. To do this, the advice of an actuary and an appraiser is critical to correctly valuing the policy. The charity may either cash the policy and use the funds immediately or pay the premiums on the policy and collect the larger death benefit when the insured dies. Of course, a very generous donor may not only donate the policy to the charity but also donate the yearly premiums to the charity. In this case, both the donation of the policy and the donated premiums would be receiptable.

ANNUITIES

An annuity is a contract under which one person deposits a sum of money with another in exchange for a subsequent income. It is basically the reverse concept of insurance.

The income may be paid for either a specified period, for life, or for life with a minimum guaranteed period. Under the latter method, if the purchaser of the annuity dies during the guaranteed period, the annuity will be paid to some other person whom the purchaser had designated to receive it.

Although annuities are normally purchased from insurance companies or trust companies, life annuities are sometimes purchased from charities.

Essentially, a person gives the charity a sum of money irrevocably in exchange for a promise by the charity to pay the donor a monthly income for life. The funds received would then be invested by the charity at a higher rate than it would pay to the donor.

For annuities issued after December 21, 2002, the donor would be eligible to receive a receipt for an amount equal to the excess of the amount contributed by the donor over the amount that would be paid at that time to an arm's-length third party to acquire an annuity to fund the guaranteed payments.

CANADIAN CULTURAL PROPERTY

The Government of Canada has set up the Canadian Cultural Property Export Review Board to certify which artwork or other item has cultural significance to Canadians. This not only applies to works with a Canadian aspect, but it also applies to any cultural work that Canada may want to keep within its borders. If the donation is certified and made to a designated institution, there is no tax due on the disposition. Thus, if the charity is hoping to attract donations of property with a particular cultural significance, it is important to secure the designation.

There are two categories of designation:

- Category A is granted for an indefinite period to institutions that are well-established and meet all of the criteria related to certain legal, curatorial and environmental requirements.
- Category B is granted in relation to an institution involved in the proposed acquisition of an object (or collection) that does not meet all of the criteria for designation, but which has demonstrated its capability to effectively preserve the type of property in question.

The criteria by which the review board makes its decisions is beyond the scope of this article, but the board has published a guide on the subject available on their website. More information on the program is available from the Department of Canadian Heritage on its website at <https://www.canada.ca/en/services/culture/history-heritage/movable-cultural-property.html>:

As a proper certification may involve many months of research, a request for certification should be made well before the donation is contemplated.

If a taxpayer donates certified property to a designated institution, there will not be any tax owing on the gift. In addition, the taxpayer is entitled to a tax receipt for 100% of the value of the gift (as determined by the review board).

INVENTORY

The determination of whether an item is inventory or capital is one of the most fundamental areas of our income tax system, but nevertheless is shrouded in vagueness and controversy. For example, to most people a house is a capital property. But if the owner of the home is engaged in the business of buying and selling homes, the property becomes inventory of a business. There is a different tax treatment on the disposition of inventory as 100% of the value is included in income (as opposed to capital, of which only 50% or 66% is included).

Nonetheless, the donation of inventory will result in tax credits that will at least offset the tax due on the disposition of the inventory.

Example:

Spock runs a bakery. His business is not incorporated, so all of the income of the business is taxed at his personal rates during the year. After Spock has deducted all of his expenses, he is left with taxable income in the year of $50,000. If Spock sells one more cake that is worth $100, he will pay tax at his bracket on that cake of, say, $31.

However, upon donating the cake, he will be entitled to tax credits of approximately $40 (assuming that he has already made at least $200 worth of donations). This is because the tax credit rate is higher than the tax payable rate. Spock can then offset the tax owed by disposing of the last cake and using the additional $9 against the tax owing on his other $50,000 of income. It's all very logical!

Of course, as income grows, so too does the tax rate, meaning that there are fewer leftover credits. In those provinces where the tax is equal to or greater than the credits generated by donation (which is all provinces except Alberta), there would be no additional tax credits left over for use. In Alberta however, the credits will always more than offset the tax on the disposition of the donated item, even at the highest brackets. Given the number of provinces, the multiplicity of tax rates and brackets, and the frequency with which they change, an accountant should be retained to calculate the results of any donation of inventory.

PERSONAL USE PROPERTY

Personal Use Property (PUP) is property that is owned by the taxpayer and that is primarily for the personal use and enjoyment of the taxpayer or persons related to the taxpayer.

PUP includes:

- Bottles of wine
- Loyalty points programs
- Air Miles
- Shoppers Optimum points
- Religious items
- Gift certificates
- Clothes
- Artwork
- Hobby items
- Comic books
- Model trains
- Toys
- Land (e.g. a fishing hole)
- Books

Normally, when these types of items are donated to a charity, the charity does not issue a receipt, nor does the owner expect one. This is, in most cases, the appropriate treatment. However, technically it does not have to be so.

The ITA specifies that for donations of PUP, the minimum cost is deemed to be $1,000. This is true regardless of the actual cost to the owner. The ITA also deems the item sold for a minimum of $1,000, again regardless of the actual sale/donation value. So, when taken into the donor's tax return, there is no taxable event on items that are worth less than $1,000.

On the other hand, a tax receipt can still be issued for these types of items. The value on the receipt would reflect the item's fair market value. This receipt could then be used to generate some tax credits on the return (small though they may be). Charities should note, however, that valuing household items can be very difficult, and receipts should only be issued if value can be defensibly determined.

Example 1

Sulu bought a "Tickle Me Elmo" doll for $20. Shortly thereafter, it became a collector's item and the fair market value increased to $100. Realizing that there are needy children without a Tickle Me Elmo, Sulu donates the toy to a local charity. In return, he receives a tax receipt for the value of $100. On his tax return Sulu calculates his capital gain as follows:

Deemed Proceeds of Disposition	$1,000
Deemed Cost	-$1,000
Capital Gain	0

As there is no capital gain, there is no tax payable. On the other hand, Sulu will receive a tax receipt for the fair market value of the doll ($100). Applying our assumptions (i.e. a tax rate of 46% and Sulu has already made at least $200 of donations), the $100 receipt will allow Sulu to claim back $46 of taxes owing from other sources.

The implication of this policy is that when items are donated which have an actual value greater than $1,000 but a cost lower than $1,000, the value of the donation will be enhanced because the amount of the capital gain will be reduced.

Example 2

McCoy decides to donate a model train set that he purchased for $100, but has it appraised in advance and discovers to his delight that it is actually worth $2,000.

McCoy still decides to donate the train set to a willing charity, which issues him a receipt for $2,000. He then calculates his taxes as follows:

Actual Proceeds of Disposition	$2,000
Deemed Cost	$1,000
Capital Gain	$1,000
Tax	$230
Tax Credits	$920
Total leftover credits	$690

There are three notes to make about the type of property donated.

First, make sure that the property is actually transferable. While loyalty program points are property, some plans will not allow you to transfer the points to anyone else, and so they effectively cannot be donated. In this scenario, a donor may consider redeeming the points and then donating the actual item. Of course, this may prove to be of limited assistance to a charity that suddenly finds itself obligated to use a plane ticket to some place it did not want to go on a date it did not want to travel.

Second, both the individual and the charity must obtain a reliable valuation. From the perspective of the individual, an improper valuation could lead to a donation tax credit being disallowed by the CRA. The charity, on the other hand, has an obligation to issue proper receipts. So, if the receipts are overvalued, the charity may find itself facing uncomfortable questions from the CRA. And the donor a difficult fight about their tax receipt.

Finally, there are rules in the ITA which prevent situations where donors are buying and donating items that fall below the $1000 threshold simply to create tax receipts to shelter income from other sources. While the charity will not necessarily be punished if involved in such a scenario, the donor could have the receipts disallowed.

LISTED PERSONAL PROPERTY

Listed Personal Property (LPP) is a subclass of PUP. It consists of certain specific items which are held both as an investment and as hobby items. The list includes artwork, stamps, books, coins and sculptures. Unless it is Certified Canadian Cultural Property (see earlier in this article), LPP has the same tax treatment as PUP.

REAL ESTATE

Generally, the donation of most real estate will be treated like the donation of any other type of capital property. If the item is inventory, the donor will be taxed on the full proceeds of disposition, and, if the item is capital, the donor will only pay tax on 50% of the proceeds of disposition. There are, however, two significant exceptions to this rule.

Principal residence

The first exception is the donation of a principal residence. Canadian residents are not taxed on the gain arising from the appreciation of their principal residence. So, if a donor bought his home for $100,000 and sells (or donates) it when it is worth $1,000,000, no tax will be payable on the appreciation in value (assuming the home was the donor's principal residence for that entire time).

If the donor were to donate the home to a charity, not only would there be no tax consequences on the disposition, but he or she would receive a tax receipt equal to the fair market value of the home at the time of the donation.

In some cases, it might make sense for the donor to leave their home to a charity in their Will. By doing this, they might be able to use the tax credits from the donation to offset the income from the deemed disposition of their other assets and carry back the credits to the previous year. In both the year of death and the year preceding death, the estate can use the tax credits to offset up to 100 per cent of the income. Given that the deemed disposition of assets (except for the principal residence) usually results in a large income in the year of death, the donor might, in fact, be able to do some significant tax planning in this way.

Environmental property

The donation of environmental property has a treatment similar to that of Certified Cultural Property. The treatment applies where property is designated as ecologically sensitive land by the Minister of the Environment (or a person designated by the Minister) and donated to any of:

- The federal or a provincial government;
- A municipality in Canada;
- A municipal or public body performing a function of government in Canada; or,
- A registered charity that has a main purpose (in the opinion of that Minister) of conserving and protecting Canada's environmental heritage, and that is approved by that Minister or that person in respect of the gift.

In any of these cases, there will be no taxable capital gain on the donation.

We have described the specific tax treatment of items donated where there is no tax on the capital gain of the item in the sections on public securities and certified cultural property. The only significant difference is that tax credits generated from a donation of this type may be carried forward for ten years. The entire value of the donation is available to offset tax owing from other sources at the highest rates.

RESIDUAL INTERESTS

It is possible to divide ownership of the property during one's life (called a life interest) from ownership upon the death of that person (called a residual interest). Once the residual interest is sold or given away, however, the property will belong to the owner of the residual interest when the owner of the life interest dies. A donor might consider this course of action in situations where they want to enjoy the income or use of the property during their lifetime and yet donate the property to the charity during their lifetime as opposed to on their death.

The value of the residual interest is calculated using an estimated value of the underlying property at the expected death of the donor (in itself determined from actuarial mortality tables) using present value dollars. This amount will be the value listed on the charity's donation receipt.

Determining the fair market value of a property at the expected death of the owner at some point in the future is a complicated mathematical task best left to a qualified actuary and appraiser.

From a tax perspective, when the owner divides the rights and donates the residual interest, the donor would generally incur a tax consequence. The tax owing will be a function of the cost of the right to the owner and its estimated value at the time of disposition. Generally speaking, this income will be treated as a capital gain. The capital gain is calculated according to a specific formula and depends on the gain in value of the residual interest relative to the entire property.

CHARITABLE REMAINDER TRUST

A trust is a legal device which effectively accomplishes one or both of the following objectives:

- It separates the ownership of property (the capital interest) from the right to receive income from the property (the income interest); and,
- It can separate the person who legally controls the property from those entitled to benefit from it.

A Charitable Remainder Trust (CRT) is similar to the donation of a residual interest in that it allows the donor to donate the capital of the trust now, but the charity does not receive it until some later point (such as on the death of the donor). A CRT is particularly useful in situations where it is difficult to record the division of interests on title (such as artwork). Despite its legal potency, creating a CRT is simply a matter of signing the appropriate legal documents.

When a donor creates a CRT, they dispose of the residual interest in the property to the trust and then donates the certain rights in the trust to the charity (the "capital interest"). It is important to note that the donation in this case occurs when the owner transfers the interest in the trust to the charity. Thus, if the underlying property is, for example, publicly-traded securities, the gift of an interest in the trust will not attract the same favourable tax treatment as donating the securities would have; it is a donation of an interest in a trust, not of securities.

The special tax treatment assigned to different types of property outlined elsewhere in this chapter (i.e. ecological property, publicly-traded securities, or certified cultural property) likely makes them inappropriate candidates for this type of donation.

It is important not to create the trust with the charity as the beneficiary, because if the donor is not careful, they will gift an interest in the trust with no property (and thus no value on the receipt), and any subsequent disposition to the trust will not be considered a gift by the CRA. The appropriate method is instead to create the trust with the donor holding both interests in the trust.

The donor then contributes the assets to the trust, and finally donates the capital interest to the charity. Of course, the donor would retain the income interest as long as is set out in the trust deed.

GIFTS TO U.S. CHARITIES

Individuals who reside in Canada and commute to their employment or place of business in the United States are allowed to deduct donations made to U.S. charitable organizations on the same terms as donations made to Canadian organizations.

There are, however, several other important conditions which must be met. Firstly, the commuter must live near the American border during the whole of the taxation year. Secondly, their U.S. employment or business income must represent the donor's chief source of income for that year. Thirdly, the donor must be able to demonstrate that the gift was made to a religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational organization created or organized in or under the laws of the United States. Finally, they must be able to demonstrate that such a gift would be allowed as a deduction under the United States Internal Revenue Code. Where all those conditions are met, the donations in question are treated as donations made to a registered charity.

VOLUNTEER SERVICES

The ITA makes it very clear that only a gift to a charity is receiptable. A gift includes property or a right to property. Unfortunately, services do not qualify as property and, therefore, are not receiptable.

GIFT BY WILL

One legal requirement of a gift is actual delivery of the gift to the recipient.

However, where a gift is made by Will, such delivery is impossible until after the death of the person—sometimes well after. Under normal circumstances, the gift would not be complete until delivery is made. However, the law allows that where a gift is made by Will, it will be considered to have been made by the deceased in the few seconds preceding death, assuming of course that delivery occurs at some point after the death. In this way, the tax credits that are generated by the donation can be applied to the donor's year of death. This is particularly useful as there is often a large tax bill owing on death.

The law allows for certain differences from a strict calculation perspective. As previously discussed, a donor is generally only entitled to offset 75% of their taxable income using donation tax credits in a given year.

However, in the year of death (i.e. from January 1st until the date of the donor's death) the donor is entitled to offset up to 100% of their income, as filed by their executor. Any unused donation tax credits can be carried back one year, to the year preceding death, and be used to offset 100% of the tax debt owing in that year as well as the tax in the first three taxation years of the estate. One stipulation though is that the gift must be transferred (and accepted) by the qualified donee within three years of the death. Obviously, if the return for the year preceding death has already been filed, then it will be necessary to file an adjustment request to claim the donation tax credits.

APPLICATION OF AMT

The Alternative Minimum Tax (the "AMT") has been part of the income tax system in Canada since 1986, many people have not heard of it because it typically does not apply to people whose main source of income is salary. As the name implies, the idea is that if a Canadian taxpayer would pay less tax under the usual set of calculations than under those required by the AMT, then the individual would be required to pay the higher of the two tax rates.

If someone is required to pay the AMT, they would only be entitled to 80% of the credits that they would otherwise be entitled. And, for donations of publicly listed shares, the individual would still be required to pay tax on 30% of any capital gain realized on the donation.

DIRECTED DONATIONS

A directed donation is one where a donor makes a contribution to a charity with the direction that it be used to support a specific individual. For example, imagine a situation where a donor makes a condition that the money given goes to support a specific individual in need. That concept has been expanded so that a donation that is made with an implicit or explicit direction that the funds be given by way of gift to a non-qualified donee could result in the revocation of the receipting charities registration. So donations with a specific intention should be carefully considered by competent counsel.

BOOKS AND RECORDS

The Canadian income tax system is based upon the principle of honest self-reporting. Consequently, one of the most pervasive issues facing charities is the maintenance of proper books and records. The importance of the issue is underlined when it is understood that charities are usually in the process of proving their innocence rather than disproving their guilt. Without records, this is close to impossible. Indeed, if the charity were to appeal a decision of revocation of its status by the CRA, it would not even be entitled to give oral testimony. So, the importance of well-maintained records is paramount.

What are books and records?

There is no standard definition of books and records. Fundamentally, however, an organization must have sufficient evidence to show that it is in compliance with the Act. To be clear, destroying evidence that an organization is not in compliance will not help the organization, as the lack of documents, in and of itself, is an offence. (Although the documents could be evidence of an offence with a more grievous penalty.)

There is a difference between the two concepts of 'books' and 'records.' 'Books' is not a defined term in the Income Tax Act but is typically understood to be accounting records. A 'record' is defined and includes "an account, an agreement, a book, a charter table, a diagram, a form, an image, an invoice, a letter, a map, a memorandum, a plan, a return, a statement, a telegram, a voucher, and any other thing containing information whether written or in any other form."

No distinction is made in law between corporate and transactional records, but it is helpful to organize a charity by thinking in these terms. Corporate records are those documents required by law to define a corporation and its governance. They are often created with the co-operation of a government office and are required so that the corporation meets certain statutory requirements.

Transactional records are those created by the organization to keep track of its operations and meetings. They still help the corporation meet its requirements under the law.

Corporate Records

A corporate entity must maintain current copies of its constituting documents (Articles of Incorporation, Articles of Continuance, Letters of Patent, Supplementary Letters of Patent, etc.), bylaws and minutes of meetings or resolutions. Organizations operating in more than one province would also be expected to have copies of their extra-provincial registration.

Meetings

Compliance with the various corporate acts requires minutes of meetings of both directors and members. Members generally meet annually while directors generally meet more often – both should have records of all their formal meetings. If issues are discussed at informal meetings, it is a good idea to make records of those as well. Often, the fact that it had the discussion is in itself valuable and it would be unwise for a charity to self-censor its minutes.

Format

There is no specific requirement that the record of happenings at meetings be kept in any particular way for the CRA's purposes (although for purposes of consistency, groups may wish to follow standard processes). Therefore, meetings that simply have notes of what was said and confirmed as accurate by the bulk of the attendees at the meeting are sufficient for most purposes.

Keep in mind that most corporate statutes do mandate that certain issues be dealt with by the members and/or directors and there may be technical requirements be met in the resolution.

Transactional Records

The vast majority of records held by a charity are its 'transactional' records. They are created by the day-to-day transactions of the organization and include its bank account statements, cheques, records of employee payment, invoices, statements of account, deposit books, etc. These are generally easy records for the organization to obtain as they are created by third parties. The challenge for most charities is to organize these records into some logical format in order that their T3010 can be produced at the end of the year. This role generally falls to a bookkeeper or some other individual prepared to keep these records.

On the assumption that the bulk of these records are being created by a third party, and that the charity simply needs to keep them, the charity will not face any difficulty in ensuring that its transactions are properly maintained.

However, there are situations in which a charity faces difficulties because it is in a non-commercial or non-traditional setting.

Charities that engage in relief of poverty may find it difficult to track the expenditures with which they give alms to the poor. This can be obvious in a situation where the charity distributes food to individuals that simply need it or seem to need it. While the CRA is obviously aware that a charity is engaged in the provision of food for the hungry, it may ask how it can be certain that food is being given only to the poor and is not, for example, being distributed to the employees of the organization or being sold. While the CRA can be forgiving in such situations, it can, in some cases, be extremely difficult to ensure that records are maintained, to demonstrate that the charity's resources are being properly used.

Some foreign countries present another problem in that often the normal transactional records we would expect in Canada – say on the purchase of office supplies – simply may not exist there. Receipts and invoices are simply not used in some parts of the world.

Charities should seek alternate means to track their resources.

Additional Records

Again, while there is no legal definition of 'additional records', these may include emails or letters to the organization — and they may include records that the organization purposely creates in order that the CRA, if it ever looks to see, will accept as proof that the organization is properly meeting its responsibilities.

Emails to and from the organization and letters to the organization must clearly be maintained. Charity officials should be careful to separate out their personal from official comments as an official may be unable to claim privacy over these emails. Moreover, emails between individuals may not necessarily be entered into the charity's records (say in a situation where they are not being saved by a corporate server). In these circumstances, directors should make sure to copy the charity so that the charity's obligations to keep records is met.

Creating Records

The organization may also seek to create records to show that it meets the legal tests involved. For example, to ensure that a charity's resources are properly used in a foreign country the charity may have the volunteers make reports, take pictures or record videos that are not otherwise necessary. Obviously, a charity must first understand the legal principle that it seeks to establish before creating the record. On this point, the charity should seek legal advice before proceeding.

Fundamentally, it is important that a charity understand what it must show in its records to comply with the law should the CRA investigate. Continuous education regarding a charity's obligations is critical so that the administration of the organization understands when to ask for reports of directors or others in whatever circumstances.

Where must they be kept?

The books and records of an organization must be kept, by law, at its registered office address. This, however, is often an impossible task because the legal documents may be more easily kept at a lawyer's office, accounting records may be with the accountant, and other records may be with the organization. It can be inconvenient and costly to keep all the records in one place – particularly if they are voluminous.

The CRA seems to understand the practical difficulties in this aspect and does not, as a matter of course, seek to confirm the location of these records.

During an audit, CRA auditors generally either ask for information to be provided to them or meet at a mutually convenient location where the records are produced.

Nevertheless, we have seen instances where charities lose track of the location of their documents and so it would be wise for an organization to be aware of its records should they have to be produced.

Electronic Record Keeping

Nowadays, more and more records are either created in paper format for conversion to electronic format or in electronic format able to be printed at any time. Obviously, the CRA is as much interested in easy record-keeping as anybody else, and rules do exist for doing so electronically. These rules are outlined in two technical documents from the CRA – IC78-10R5 and IC05-1R1.

An organization that keeps electronic records must be able to provide them in an electronically readable and useable format to the CRA auditors so that they can be read on CRA equipment (although not every CRA department will accept electronic documents). For most modern records this is not an issue if they can be produced in PDF format.

A regular problem is that the organization uses a bookkeeping or accounting software unknown to the CRA.

However, as these records can often be converted from one format to another, there is usually a workaround.

Electronic files can be encrypted, but the password must be provided to the CRA if requested.

If a record was originally created in paper format and then converted to electronic, the paper does not need to be kept. However, an electronic record must always be kept, even if converted from one format to another.

The CRA does allow for the keeping of these records online in the cloud.

However, their requirement is that the server be located in Canada or at least that a copy of the records be maintained on a server in Canada.

One difficulty that arises from time to time — and it does not apply only to electronic records — is the accidental destruction of records. With paper records this can happen in terms of a fire or some other disaster. But with electronic records, the loss of a USB key could undermine years of work by the organization. For this reason, electronic records should be copied and kept in safe, redundant locations as much as possible. If records are lost, the CRA may seek proof or a reason for such a loss and may be forgiving in the circumstance. However, there's no guarantee that the CRA will take this approach, and you can assume that the CRA auditors have heard the “dog ate my homework” type of excuse more often than most teachers.

How long to keep records

Generally speaking, all books and records must be kept for a minimum of six years from the end of the last tax year from which they relate. The tax year end is the same as the fiscal year end for the corporation, but is, by definition, the calendar year end for trusts and unincorporated associations. For purposes of the Employment Insurance Act and the Canada Pension Plan Act, the retention period begins at the end of the calendar year to which the books and records relate.

Technically, duplicate donation receipts of a registered charity (other than receipts for donations of property, which may be held for longer periods of time) is two years from the end of the calendar year in which the donations were made — but it would be inadvisable for a charity to rely on this specific requirement rather than the general one.

The obligations above relate to the Income Tax Act, but it is important to understand that obligations also exist in the various corporate acts. Typically, Corporate Records (as opposed to Transactional Records) are not destroyed.

Who Can See Records

Outside of the civil litigation — in which a Plaintiff or Defendant could be compelled to produce documents relating to the litigation — there are really three groups of individuals who may be able to see various parts of corporate records. The directors, the members and government officials each have different levels of access to the charity's records — depending upon the circumstances.

What Language

The law requires that books and records be kept in either English or French.

Organizations that operate overseas typically have records in another language, and while technically the organization should have them translated as they are produced, practically this is often an expensive task. Moreover, CRA audit procedures limit an audit to a certain number of years, translating every document as it comes through may be unnecessary for years that are not under audit.

Even for years under audit, the CRA at times requests just sample documents, so the charity may be in the position of translating documents that will never be read.

Generally, the CRA allows a period of time to produce documents and understands that organizations operating in non-English or French-speaking parts of the world will have documents in other languages. Indeed, if someone sends an email to an organization in a language that is not English, the organization can hardly be faulted for the fact that its books and records are only in English or French.

WILLS

You Are Hired... Wait, Did I Even Apply?

No, you likely did not.

Most people don't apply to become an executor of an estate. An executor is responsible for administering the estate of a deceased person from the date of death until all debts are paid and all assets of the estate are realized and distributed in accordance with the terms of the deceased's will.

Some people do not even know they have been chosen until the person appointing them has died. Surprise! How is this possible? A person who makes a will, referred to as the "testator", appoints individual(s) or a corporate executor (for another blog) in the will to be the testator's executor(s). After the will is properly executed it is usually hidden away in a safe or secret place or locked away in safekeeping, maybe even at an ultra-secure lawyer's vault, where few people can see it or access it.

How can this kind of responsibility be imposed on you without your knowledge?

Even though it would be nice, there is no requirement in law in Ontario to notify someone that you are appointing them to administer your estate.

I would like to clarify, that even if you are appointed in a will as an executor, there is no legal obligation to accept the position. Moral obligations are another story. You will, however, need to decide immediately whether to accept it or not. Once you start acting as an executor and doing the work, you are not allowed to just quit. A court order will likely be required to remove you from this job once you start. I wouldn't suggest trying to get fired either.

What if an executor were an actual job that you applied for? The job posting might look something like this:

Executor: No application or experience necessary

Job skills: _____

Ability to:

- Grieve and work simultaneously
- Maintain composure amidst family disputes
- Read through pages and pages of often technical legal language to understand what the testator intended
- Carry out the wishes of the testator, even if you don't agree with them
- Distribute potentially large sums of money to beneficiaries
- Be a brilliant detective and spend hours searching out every asset the deceased could possibly own
- Attribute an accurate value to random furniture, personal articles, and household items (did you ever watch The Price is Right?)
- Understand complex tax filings
- Anticipate and get ahead of unknown deadlines
- Complete forms and applications

perfectly with no errors

- Comprehend technical legal language
- Pry necessary information from organizations with strict privacy policies
- Explain to beneficiaries who want their money why things take so long

Necessary attributes:

- Superior communication abilities
- Unwavering patience
- Masterful task management and prioritization strengths
- Exemplary organizational skills (so much paperwork)
- Empathetic, therapist-like listening skills
- Certified accountant level math skills
- Sensitivity to delicate family dynamics
- Immunity to criticism
- Pro-level teamwork skills (multiple executors MUST cooperate)

Remuneration (Pay):

- Sometimes expected to be done for free (usually by family)
- Not necessarily commensurate with experience
- The generally accepted percentage guidelines for calculating your compensation are based on the value of receipt and disbursements, but may not reflect the complexity of the work
- Not a guaranteed sum: payment amount to be determined (reduced)

by a multitude of factors

- Actual amount subject to approval by either the beneficiaries or a judge
- Must prepare detailed accounting records (no matter how good your math skills are) and keep track of all your time and efforts spent, to support your claim for compensation
- Most work must be done before any compensation is paid (could be years later)
- It is taxable income (of course)

Provisos:

- Must be available to do all necessary tasks and attend all appointments, usually during regular working hours, regardless of having a full-time job, family, or other obligations
- Quitting or giving up strictly prohibited, unless a judge agrees

- You are a fiduciary and will be held to that standard (see ability to comprehend technical legal language listed above)
- Inheriting another problematic, unfinished estate is a possibility (was the deceased an executor?)
- If anything goes wrong, you may be personally liable

If this sounds like your ideal job, there is no need to apply. Simply sit back and wait. One day, if you live long enough, or know enough people, or have a family, and are somewhat likeable, or even if you are not, this amazing job could be all yours.

Fortunately, you CAN hire professionals to assist you, keeping in mind that any tasks undertaken by professional advisors which an executor could reasonably be expected to complete should be deducted from your negotiated compensation amount.

Flexible foundations

The recent growth in the number and value of private foundations in Canada is certainly driving examination of “spending pathways”. There is a contemporary bias that a spending plan needs to be clearly established at the outset, alongside mission, vision and values. A recent article in The Philanthropist Journal funded by the newly-minted Definity Insurance Foundation explores various options. Unfortunately, the U.S. experience is so much better publicized and documented, and this paper misses many Canadian examples. It also mislabelled a common, non-doctrinaire model: the flexible foundation.

The article uses the term “accidental spend-down”, which I believe is both wrong and pejorative. I think most foundations are flexible and evolve over time, and that is a good thing. A flexible endowment is one that has capital but also uses it along with investment returns over time to maximize public impact. A rigidly defined foundation timeline is unnecessary. Indeed, it may extend over two or three generations, but that is different than truly perpetual.

An unrecognized norm

Many well-known, established Canadian private foundations are on a slow, unannounced spend-down. Why? Because they spend more than the minimum annual 5% disbursement quota each year. They spend at a rate that is greater than the historical rate of return. They are also human institutions that can run out of steam due to inter-personal dynamics.

A minority of foundations have explicit spend-down mandates or sunset dates. By analogy only a small minority of people know their date of death, or companies know when they will go out of business. That's OK. Labelling flexibility as “accidental spend-down” downgrades the importance of engaged, dynamic philanthropy that changes over time. The emphasis should be on philanthropic responsiveness and finding the right balance between current and future community needs.

Sure, flexible foundations have invested capital and will be around for a long-time, but many foundation boards like the option to grant and spend beyond the minimum annual disbursement quota of 5% per annum. They are committed to charitable benefit and impact. These foundations may appear permanent, but they will evolve, and change. They won't last forever, and that's fine. They do their work quietly and effectively.

PROFILE

Chris Koch Kayaking on Mara Lake, BC.

The story of Chris Koch

Chris Koch was born and raised in the small farming and ranching community of Nanton, Alberta, and to him, it was the best place in the world to grow up. Shortly after his birth, his grandmother received the news that he had been born without both arms and legs. Unfazed, she jokingly responded, "Bruce [Chris's dad] never did finish anything he started!" Her reaction set the tone for his parents' approach to raising him and shaped his own philosophy that a healthy dose of humour can help ease the challenges of life.

Despite being born without arms and legs, Chris's childhood was very normal. Like any other small-town kid, he played road hockey and baseball with his friends, and like any mischievous youngster, he occasionally found himself in trouble at school and faced his parents' reprimands when his grades fell short.

Most of his earliest and fondest memories were around the farm. He eagerly helped out on his grandpa's farm, doing whatever chores he could. One lesson he learned early on was that if he wanted to ski, golf, or drive a tractor or a combine, it was never about how difficult it would be but about figuring out a way to do it and making it happen.

With that mindset, combined with the resources and backing from his family and the support he received from The War Amps Child Amputee (CHAMP)

Program, the possibilities were endless. The War Amps provided him with financial assistance for artificial limbs and adaptive devices. He attended their seminars, which encouraged him to develop a positive attitude towards his amputations and to believe that he could achieve whatever he set his mind to. He could snowboard, golf, surf, and work on the farm.

"Joining The War Amps at a very young age was a game-changer for me," says Chris. "It gave me the courage to try any activity I wanted, without limitations. The War Amps taught me that it's not about what you're missing, but about what you can do with what you have. Their motto, 'It's what's left that counts,' has been my guiding principle ever since."

Later in life, along with his buddy, he travelled across Canada and Europe, seeing incredible places and meeting amazing people. He shared his story and experiences, hoping to encourage others to live their lives to their greatest potential and to have fun, just as he does. His dream of hosting a motivational speaking tour across Canada, titled "If I Can...", came to fruition shortly after these travels. He now travels from coast to coast, delivering his message at schools, conferences, and various events and venues.

A few years ago, he decided to travel with his backpack from Calgary all the way to St. John's, Newfoundland, using his longboard to get around. He saw amazing places and met many people along the way. He says it is one of the coolest things he has ever done. When someone asked what he did for a living, he loved being able to tell them that he drove large combines and tractors. It wasn't a job one would expect a guy without arms and legs to be doing!

"I'm just a regular dude," he would tell them. He can do everything everyone else is doing. He loves farming, traveling, and having fun with what life has to offer. His life has been an adventure, filled with laughter and resilience. He has never let limitations or obstacles deter him from pursuing his dreams. Along his travels, he encouraged others to adopt the same mindset. He believes that worrying about how one looks cheats oneself out of opportunities.

Chris also continues to attend The War Amps CHAMP seminars, empowering young amputees to look beyond their challenges and dream of the possibilities.

"Chris's story was never about the difficulty of a task but about finding a way to accomplish it," says Danita Chisholm, Executive Director of The War Amps. His outlook reflects the joy and fulfillment he has found in life—he doesn't dwell on what he lacks; he celebrates what he has."

"The War Amps is committed to helping young amputees live their best lives," Chisholm continues. "Chris is a fantastic example of this. His positive outlook and determination are an inspiration to everyone. His story shows incredible strength and resilience."

The War Amps receives no government grants and would welcome a charitable estate donation in your will. With your help, and through public support of the Key Tag Service, The War Amps is able to provide Canada's amputees with essential artificial limbs, peer connections, advocacy support and so much more.

Since its founding in 1918, The War Amps programs have grown from assisting war amputees – whom they still serve – to all amputees, including children. Today, there is still much to do to ensure amputees have the artificial limbs they need to lead independent and active lives. The public's support of the Key Tag Service, which has returned more than 1.5 million sets of lost keys to their owners, funds essential programs for all amputees across Canada, including CHAMP for child amputees. The War Amps does not receive government grants.

‘Till Death Do Us Part

Did you know the human brain is wired to prevent us from thinking about our own mortality?

Yair Dor-Ziderman, a graduate student at Bar-Ilan University's Gonda Multidisciplinary Brain Research Centre, has spent the last few years studying the way people deal with death. "The brain does not accept that death is related to us. We have this primal mechanism that means when the brain gets information that links self to death, something tells us it's not reliable, so we shouldn't believe it."

Maybe this accounts for the worrisome stats recently gathered by the Angus Reid Institute pollsters, the following DO NOT HAVE A WILL.:

- 69 per cent of people between the age the ages of 35 to 44;
- 49 percent of Canadians between 45 and 54; and
- 34 percent of people between 55 and 64

Everyone who wants their estate to pass on to their heirs in the timeliest and most tax-efficient manner may find these statistics mindboggling. But the point of this blog is to have an erudite discussion about planning concerns for dog owners, and how to ensure that our four-legged family members are assured of being properly taken care of when their owners pass.

Today, over half of Canadians own a pet. However, a recent survey shows only 7% of pet owners have made formal arrangements for them.

PUBLIC SERVICE ANNOUNCEMENT

TO ALL YOU PET OWNERS – if there is no provision for your pets in your estate plans, or if you're one of the many who do not have a will, your beloved pet might not be taken care of in the manner to which they've become accustomed to after you're gone.

In my very unscientific survey of pet owners, I often get the response: "the kids will certainly take care of her" or "my best friend has assured me not to worry." But these statements are loaded with assumptions.

As a daughter of a retired veterinarian, I thought I knew everything I needed to know about pet care until my multi-dog owning parent became incapacitated overnight. Not only was there nothing in his will about his dogs, he hadn't even entertained the possibility that his dogs would still be around after he was no longer able to care for himself.

It was left to me to find caregivers who could not only tend to him but to the dogs as well. When it came time to move him into a long-term care facility, we were fortunate that there was someone who was willing to give his beloved Bob a home on the agreement that our family would cover all the vet bills.

A BMO Estate Planning survey, "Estate planning for complex family dynamics," revealed that, of respondents who indicated they had made some kind of arrangement for their pet, only two in five had chosen to provide a monetary legacy to cover the cost of pet care after they died. Without financial support, the next-door neighbour or relative you're relying on to take care of FIDO may not be able to do so as the pet ages. The most significant costs of pet care come in the pet's senior years – medication and even surgery can be prohibitively expensive for somebody to take on simply as a favour to you.

Even though our brain likes to shield us from the inevitable, it behooves us to think not just about death but about the facts relating to incapacity:

- A healthy woman, in her working years, stands a 1 in 4 chance of suffering a disability that lasts three months or longer (see Statistics Canada's 2017 Canadian Survey on Disability).
- Once you enter your retirement years, the odds of becoming incapacitated increase dramatically, due in large part to the odds of suffering from Alzheimer's disease or another age-related dementia condition (see the Alzheimer's Association's Alzheimer's Disease Facts and Figures).
- One in three seniors is suffering from Alzheimer's, or a similar condition, at the time of their death (see the Alzheimer's Association's Alzheimer's

COMMITMENT

Concrete Steps Towards Reconciliation

Many law firms and legal organizations are showing that commitment to reconciliation with Indigenous people is more than just a land acknowledgement.

In Calgary, the recently launched Indigenous Justice Centre of Alberta promotes a holistic, restorative and culturally relevant justice system for Indigenous people.

Those who are facing criminal charges can access pro bono services that include everything from legal counsel and court navigation services to assistance with finding housing and rehabilitation resources.

Executive director Noreen Demeria says it's critical for law firms and other legal organizations to take their lead from Indigenous people and communities.

"It's important to make space to hear those voices," she says.

While Indigenous people make up approximately five per cent of Canadian adults, more than 30 per cent of people serving federal criminal sentences are Indigenous, according to 2023 statistics published by Public Safety Canada. The same report found that Indigenous women make up half of all incarcerated women federally.

Addressing this overrepresentation in the criminal justice system is one of the 94 calls to action from the Truth and Reconciliation Commission.

Demeria, who is Anishinaabe originally from Tootinaowaziibeeng First Nation in Manitoba, says that it's important to consider history and culture in this context.

"Look at how colonialism and the tools of colonialism, like residential schools, have impacted our communities and families," she says.

Being there for the long haul

Charlene Theodore, chief inclusion officer at McCarthy Tétrault in Toronto, says her firm is committed to addressing the calls to action put forward by the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada.

"Like everyone else, we started out with land acknowledgments. But there was always a bigger plan," she says.

"The firm has had a long commitment to diversity and inclusion. We always carved out a place for cultural awareness regarding Indigenous issues and truth and reconciliation."

Theodore says that McCarthy Tétrault focuses on cultural competency, education and community involvement.

"One of the key objectives of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission's report is creating and maintaining mutually respectful relationships with Indigenous communities around us. And that can't happen if all you have is a land acknowledgement," she says.

"That can only happen if you're in there for the long haul, which means

Noreen Demeria, Executive Director
Indigenous Justice Centre of Alberta

cultural competency and engaging, and authentically working with them to develop that relationship."

John P. Brown was a litigation partner at McCarthy Tétrault for many years before retiring to become the legal and strategic advisor of Indigenous initiatives.

"The purpose of doing that, from my perspective, was to help the firm engage in a meaningful and authentic way with the Indigenous communities in the cities in which our law firm operates," says Brown, who is based in Toronto.

His family on his father's side is Sto:lo, whose traditional territory is in British Columbia.

Brown says his goals in his new position were to increase cultural competency within the firm and, once that was sufficiently developed, to help the law firm work with Indigenous communities, mostly on a pro bono basis.

"The first step was land acknowledgments. But that is meaningless unless you have cultural competency and unless you take steps after that to engage with the Indigenous community in a meaningful way," he says.

Among other initiatives, McCarthy Tétrault assisted with the creation of the Canadian Bar Association's Truth and Reconciliation Toolkit, an online resource to help law firms create reconciliation action plans.

The firm also serves as a partner in the Indigenous Human Rights Program with Pro Bono Students Canada and other organizations to assist Indigenous community members.

"We help them with advice, guidance, and if necessary, taking them to the tribunals for hearings," says Brown.

The firm also has an Indigenous speakers' series, which brings in experts from various fields to spark discussion.

Aaron Runge, managing partner of MLT Aikins LLP in Western Canada, says his firm has also "embraced the direction from the Truth and Reconciliation Commission."

A key priority for the firm is education, specifically ensuring that lawyers and staff learn about the historic injustices towards Indigenous people.

His firm hosts events showcasing Indigenous speakers and perspectives and shares educational resources with its lawyers and staff. There's also an online resource centre, which includes recommended readings, films, podcasts and courses.

On September 30, Truth and Reconciliation Day, the firm closes its offices to give employees an opportunity to continue their education on Indigenous issues.

MLT Aikins LLP is also looking to increase equitable access to jobs by creating an Indigenous scholarship designed to reduce barriers for Indigenous students pursuing legal careers.

Runge says that a commitment to truth and reconciliation makes sense from both a moral and a business perspective.

"First, we think it's the right thing to do. As lawyers, we have an important role in access to justice and a professional moral obligation to support Indigenous communities," he says.

"If you look at the Indigenous population which is one of the fastest growing in Canada, from a business perspective, we recognize the strength and influence that Indigenous communities are having now and will have on the future of business in Canada."

Runge says his firm also serves as legal counsel to Indigenous clients.

"Indigenous communities have developed into very sophisticated institutional clients and significant players in multiple sectors in the Canadian economy, and they require sophisticated legal advice to navigate complex transactions," he says.

For other firms, especially smaller ones, looking to increase their commitment to truth and reconciliation with Indigenous people, Runge recommends starting with education on topics such as unconscious bias, and learning about historical injustices.

However, he cautions that law firms need to ensure that their efforts are not simply performative. For example, if a firm shares educational resources but does not take any other steps to address the Truth and Reconciliation Commission's calls to action.

"Focus on how to hire and retain Indigenous lawyers and staff," Runge says.

"You can't really learn from Indigenous peoples if they're not in the room with you."

Theodore says that her firm treats the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada's calls to action as an obligation.

"As leaders in our communities, lawyers have the ability and the obligation to help make things better," she says.

CONSERVATION

Tech Tools in the Polar Bear Conservation Toolbox

Credit: © Richard Barrett / WWF-UK

Monitoring polar bears and their Arctic habitats is critical in our quest to understand how they are responding to climate change—especially diminishing sea ice. When the Agreement on the Conservation of Polar Bears was reached 50 years ago, researchers had few options at their disposal for monitoring polar bears.

But thanks to technology, that's not the case anymore.

Several new tools have emerged in recent years that could provide scientists with new ways to track and monitor polar bears so we can better understand how they are faring. We look at three innovations that are providing new ways to collect the information needed to manage and conserve these Arctic animals.

These innovations also aim to address recent concerns on the part of Arctic Indigenous communities that some research methods can disturb polar bears.

1. Taking Inspiration from Nature

Anyone who owns a dog knows just how sticky—and persistent—burrs can be. But researchers at Polar Bears International, Toronto's York University and 3M have used burrs as inspiration for a new method to track polar bears.

The “burr on fur” device temporarily attaches to the bears' fur and carries basic GPS tags that transmit tracking information to researchers. The device is non-toxic and designed to fall off seven months to a year after being attached.

The researchers have developed several prototypes. One is shaped like a pentagon and pulls the bear's fur through copper tubes, which researchers crimp to hold the fur in place. Another is a metal triangle with strong brushes resembling pipe cleaners on each side that get caught in the bear's fur.

But for the burr on fur method to succeed, the device must be able to withstand harsh Arctic conditions, including extreme cold, saltwater and snow—and that's a challenge the researchers are still working on. They've tested the prototypes' performances in zoos and aquariums as well as on wild polar bears in western Hudson Bay in the Canadian Arctic. They plan to use the data they gather to make design adjustments.

2. Developing a Better Ear Tag

Two key challenges with using ear tags to monitor polar bears are that the antennae can ice up or break, and the tags need to reliably drop off after a set amount of time. In 2018, WWF-US teamed up with the US Fish and Wildlife Service and a Canadian engineering company named MistyWest to develop an ear tag that could overcome these issues. (A US-based design company named IDEO was also initially part of the project.)

Together, they have created an ear tag prototype with a completely internal antenna and an attachment mechanism that is guaranteed to drop off after the tag's use period. To develop a tag small and light enough to sit on a polar bear's ear, the group took moulds of bears' ears. Although the group had set out to develop a waterproof enclosure for the tag that could withstand the Arctic's harsh conditions, it has not succeeded yet.

The internal antenna design and associated open-source files are now offered on GitHub to allow other developers to advance and refine this innovative technology. WWF plans to collaborate with manufacturers and other innovators to incorporate this antenna technology into ear tags that can be used on polar bears and other species.

3. Using eDNA to Monitor Bears

Every living organism sheds cells into the environment, leaving behind traces of its DNA. You can think of these traces as a “genetic fingerprint.” For nearly a decade, WWF has been working on a project to retrieve environmental DNA (eDNA) from polar bear footprints in the snow to support conservation efforts. In 2018, WWF teamed up with MIX Research to try to retrieve DNA from the nuclei of cells. The DNA contains the unique “genetic fingerprint” of every polar bear.

ESTATE PLANNING

Why Leave a Donation in your Will to Charity?

You probably know about people like John Labatt (the man behind the largest brewery in Canada), H.J. Heinz II (the one and only ketchup king), and Andrew Carnegie (the 19th century industrialist). Not only were they all savvy businessmen, they donated huge amounts of money at the end of their lives. Establishing research centers, funding healthcare and the arts, their endowments continue to make profound contributions decades later.

Generosity is a powerful force for good, but when we think about philanthropy, it's easy to think of the ultra-rich or those big name celebrities. But did you know regular Canadians are making big moves in philanthropy too? They are doing it using the power of their Will.

Take Michael Vechikar, who always gives when he can to local charities, but making big donations seemed a bit out of reach. When he and his wife learned they could include charitable gifts in their Will, they looked at the numbers and realized setting aside even 3% could translate to a five-figure donation. That's WAY more than they would normally be able to donate.

In his words: "I care a lot about what's happening in the world and in my community. It's always been at the back of my mind (that I need to do more), I just never knew where to start."

These stories all have a common thread: a desire to leave behind something that outlasts them and continues to do good. Imagine how leaving a donation in your Will could create lasting positive change and support the causes that mean the most to you?

Why more Canadians are choosing to leave donations to a charity in their Will

In 2020, 5% of Canadians left a donation to charity in their Will. In 2022, that number rose to 8%. In just three years, 1.2 million more Canadians decided to leave a legacy donation. As we observe the trends, we know that an extra 22% of Canadians are now planning to add a charitable donation in their Will.

Why the surge? It's a combination of both difficult economic times and concern over urgent global issues. The cost of living may have increased dramatically, leaving folks with less money to donate to charity, but the desire to make a difference has never been greater.

People are getting smarter about their finances. So it's no wonder they are realizing that a donation in their Will is a really smart way to give and make their mark in this world.

Why donate to a charity in your Will?

There are a few reasons why it's a really practical decision to give in this way:

- You can meet daily needs while making a difference: First things first, you need to take care of your day-to-day. Like many of us, you gives when he can to local charities, but making big donations seemed a bit out of reach. When he and his wife learned they could include charitable gifts in their Will, they looked at the numbers and realized setting aside even 3% could translate to a five-figure donation. That's WAY more than they would normally be able to donate.

In his words: "I care a lot about what's happening in the world and in my community. It's always been at the back of my mind (that I need to do more), I just never knew where to start."

These stories all have a common thread: a desire to leave behind some-contribute to your cause when and where you can. A charitable gift in your Will supplements your giving goals, it allows you to give so much more without taking away from your daily needs.

- You can donate a larger amount: Donating $20,000 now might seem a bit out of this world, but what if we told you that even a small percentage of your Will could translate into a gift this size? If you don't believe us, take a look at the Will Power Legacy calculator at willpower.ca
- Your good work lives on: If you've been an advocate, volunteer or pillar in your community, a gift in your Will makes sure the good work continues. Not only that, your ongoing influence can rally your family, and motivate future generations to become advocates too! .
- You're making a savvy financial decision: After you pass, all your assets will be realized and counted as income, and your family will be left to deal with some pretty hefty taxes owed by your estate. This is where that donation will come in handy. It will trigger a charitable tax credit that could significantly decrease, and sometimes even eliminate, the taxes altogether.

The biggest myth about donating to charity in a Will

I'm sure it comes as no surprise - the biggest reason why Canadians don't leave a charitable donation in their Will is because they plan on leaving everything to their family and loved ones. Believing that a donation takes away from your family's inheritance is a BIG misconception.

Let's have some fun for a moment. Imagine taking your Lotto Max ticket to the convenience store and you hear the jingle. You've won! Not only that, you've won big: 1 million dollars. Suddenly you're thinking about all the boxes you'd check off:

- ☒ Get that boat you've always dreamed of.
- ☒ Finally take your kids to Italy.
- ☒ Help your family members the way you want to.

- ☒ Donate to that cause you've always loved.

Just imagining the ways you could make a difference around you fills you with joy.

Alright, let's come back to earth again. Guess what? You don't need to win the lottery to experience the joy of helping others in big ways. And though we can't help you make it to Italy, we're here to tell you that it's actually possible to help your family and the charities you care about.

According to StatsCan, the average Canadian household net worth is around $980,000, which isn't too far from 1 million. Of course, this is made up of assets like your house, RRSP, insurance policies and investments. When you think about it, that's a large sum that can make a huge difference. For many Canadians of average means, choosing to leave a small percentage of their estate to charity translates to anywhere from $20-35K.

This is the power of leaving a donation in your Will to a charity

How charitable donations in a Will can reduce taxes.

How does the Canadian government encourage us to donate to charities? By offering us some of the best tax incentives in the world.

Here's the truth: that last tax bill is likely to be your biggest one of all. After everything is turned into income – your real estate, investments, leftover RRSPs, etc. – your estate will have a lot to declare on its final tax form. But if you plan ahead there are some clever ways to avoid the Canada Revenue Agency and make sure your money goes to the people and causes that mean more to you. . Here are three tricks you may not know about:

1. Donate securities in-kind: If you have publicly traded securities that have appreciated in value, you can donate them to a registered charity and get a double tax benefit. You eliminate both the capital gains on your securities plus get a tax credit for your estate.

Note: Just make sure the stocks are transferred to the charity for them to sell, otherwise the double tax credit won't apply!

2. Name a charity as a beneficiary on a life insurance policy: Whether you took out a policy yourself, or were given one through work, adding a charity as one of your beneficiaries will allow you to multiply your donation (and get a bigger tax credit).

3. Naming a charity as a beneficiary of your leftover RRSPs/RRIFs: If you have any money left over in your RRSP or RRIF when you die, it will be heavily taxed. But if you name a charity as a beneficiary you can nearly eliminate the taxes that would have to be paid. It's also the most quick, easy, and flexible way to leave a legacy gift.

Note: If you live in Quebec, you can only name a charity as a beneficiary of your RRSP through your Will.

Please remember, everyone's financial situation is different. If you'd like to know what works best for you, speak to a financial advisor who knows about estate and charitable planning. We've compiled a list of financial advisors (many who offer free consultations) at willpower.ca

Dream big: Choosing a charity to partner with

This is the fun part, dreaming about the kind of impact you'd like to make. Maybe you're passionate about the environment, or believe in the power of music to create social change.

If you're unsure which charity to include in your Will, we get it. There are a lot of options and that can be overwhelming, which is why most of us struggle to make donations in the first place. Simplifying options is helpful, which is why we've helped you find charities by cause and see how they would use a gift in your Will. You can also review this copy of the Canadian Donor's Guide which has many charities listed alphabetically and indexed by category and geographical location.

Here are some questions to help you get started:

- What are the most important causes to me?
- What kind of change would I like to see happen?
- Which charities tackle the causes I believe in?

Start with the charities you're already involved in, or have helped you or your family in the past.. Remember that nothing is set in stone, you can (and probably will) update your Will several times in your life, so you can re-evaluate your charities then.

And if you're thinking, "I want to see the effect of my donation in my lifetime", you'll be happy to know that many charities invite legacy donors into the fold to learn more about the cause and what their donation will do. So speak to your chosen charities, let them know about your intentions, you won't be held to any commitment but you just might be wowed by your possible impact.

How to write a Will in Canada (and make the most of it)

When's the right time to write a Will? Ideally, yesterday. But today works, too. We hear a lot of people say "I don't want to think about death," and to that we say: this is about life! Writing a Will is about who you are, the life you want to lead, and how you want to be remembered.

We know it can feel intense, but think of writing a Will like getting an oil change or cleaning the gutters ...it's just one of those life maintenance tasks us adults have to do.

Hopefully you've realized the time is now, so let's show you how to write a Will and get the most out of it.

1. Think about the most important people in your life. Who do you want to inherit the bulk of your property or assets? It can be family or friends or even an organization. Make sure you have the legal names of all your beneficiaries.
Note: if you have minor children or pets you'll need choose someone who can care for them in your absence. You'll also need to choose an executor to carry out your Will.
2. Think about your legacy and the impact you want to make. What are you passionate about? What causes and organizations speak to you? We suggest you narrow down to no more than three. You can use our charity finder to grab all the details you'll need to include them in your Will and/or reference this copy of the Canadian Donor's Guide.
3. Take stock of what you have. You don't need to know the numbers down to the detail, but you should have a handle on your assets (real estate, savings, a business or valuables) and debts (mortgages, student loans, lines of credit, etc.).
Note: Once you have a handle on the size of your estate, you can start figuring out what percentage should go to each of your beneficiaries, including your chosen charities.
4. Think about who is going to draft your documents? There are many choices when it comes to Will writing these days. But if you'd like advice on how to divide your estate - especially if you have a complicated family or financial situation - and save on taxes, you'll definitely want to work with a lawyer or notary if you live in Quebec or BC. Otherwise you might explore a reputable online

Will platform.

Note: if you are going to write a Will with family and charity in mind, it's important to work with a professional who's in the know. We have a list of lawyers and notaries at willpower.ca who are experts in estate and charity planning.

There you go, that's not that bad. Only 4 steps and you're done! Don't forget to pull out your Will every couple of years to see if there are any updates that need to be made.

The power of your legacy is in your Will

At the end of the day, it's not all about money – it's about making a difference. While we work hard to do meaningful things with our lives, it's pretty amazing to consider how that work can continue after we've taken that final bow. The show goes on when you include a charity in your Will.

Think of it as your way of saying, "I believe in a future where everyone has a shot, where our planet is cherished, and where kindness triumphs." You get to be part of something bigger—something that helps shape a better world for generations to come. Who doesn't want that?

If you want to learn more about the power of your Will, join us for a free webinar hosted by Laurie Fox, Will Power campaign director, and Keith Thomson, financial advisor, educator and consultant specializing in estate and charitable tax planning. You can watch on-demand or join us for a live session at willpower.ca/webinar.

Will Power is a national public education campaign designed to inspire Canadians to think differently about charitable giving and empower them to create positive change through their Wills. Will Power is spearheaded by the Canadian Association of Gift Planners (CAGP) and the CAGP Foundation, collaborating with charities and advisors from across Canada to raise the level of charitable gifts through Wills and generate $58-billion for important causes in this country.

CONSERVATION

Growing Harmony: Agriculture and Conservation

Born and raised in Calgary, we took many family camping trips into the Prairies. I was always awed by the massive expanses of grasslands, the endless blue skies, and the diversity of birds, mammals and insects we would see. I remember having to clean our windshield at every stop along the way because the dead bugs accumulated so quickly as we drove along. These days, invertebrate populations have collapsed, the swarms have all but disappeared, and I don't think my kids even know that gas stations have squeegees. We can think of our too-clean windshields as the canary in the coal mine: Prairie ecosystems are in trouble, and our agricultural productivity may follow if we don't act.

Prairie grasslands are workhorses, absorbing and storing billions of tonnes of carbon, providing protection from flooding and drought, and helping purify our water. These landscapes, spanning much of southern Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, also play an important role in agriculture. More than 70 per cent of Canada's agricultural land mass is found across this region.

We rely on the food grown on this land every day; land that is typically converted from natural ecosystems and accompanied by a loss of biodiversity. Across Canada's Prairie grasslands, less than 20 per cent of these natural habitats remain intact, and more is lost every year.

Recognizing the importance of agriculture to humanity and the potential for better harmony between production and conservation, the Kunming-Montreal Global Biodiversity Framework created Target 10 to ensure that areas of agriculture, and other productive sectors, are managed sustainably.

A recent survey conducted by Abacus on behalf of the Canadian Wildlife Federation suggests that the vast majority (greater than 75 per cent) of Canadians are unfamiliar with our native Prairie ecosystems, or that they are one of the most endangered ecosystems on the planet. Yet, the same study demonstrates that once informed, Canadians are supportive of efforts to conserve what remains. We need to ensure that the significance of our Prairies, and the agricultural stewards who keep these places functional and thriving, remain a secret no longer.

Precious, productive lands

While much can be achieved through more sustainable agricultural practices across the country, the grazing of cattle on our native Prairie grasslands provides Canada with a fortuitous opportunity where food production and biodiversity can be mutually beneficial.

Ranches require large, contiguous blocks of intact grasslands for grazing, and they contribute significantly to biodiversity conservation in the agricultural context. Ranches make up just

Jeremy Hogan,
Director of Prairie Grassland Conservation
Nature Conservancy Canada

over a third of Canada's agricultural land use, yet nearly 70 per cent of wildlife found on agricultural lands are found on ranches. Numerous studies have demonstrated the positive impact sustainable cattle grazing has on grassland health and the plants and animals that live there. This includes endangered species with specific habitat requirements and many grasses and other plants that thrive in grazed landscapes. Cows and other large grazing mammals are effective at dispersing seeds long distances, and their dung offers an injection of nutrients into the landscape.

Evolving tools and approaches to accelerating conservation

It is crucial that NCC prioritizes the most effective and efficient conservation opportunities available. Its work is rooted in an evidence-based decision-making process that incorporates high-quality information from collaborators across the country, representative of diverse worldviews and lived experiences, supplemented by NCC's open-source spatial analysis toolkit. This process allows us to be sure that our efforts are resulting in durable outcomes and creating resilient landscapes.

The Canadian Prairies are one of the most densely settled areas in Canada, and there is a high degree of overlap between key biodiversity areas and privately owned lands in this region.

Additionally, 75 per cent of the remaining intact Prairie grasslands exist on private agricultural lands. To achieve durable conservation outcomes requires interested landowners, and tools that allow for partnership.

Conservation agreements are an effective mechanism to formalize such partnership: a landowner can remain on their land operating their ranch in a way that is compatible with biodiversity outcomes, and legal restrictions are placed on title that prevent future development or conversion of the ecosystem. These agreements are built through mutual agreement and trust, and have proven to be cost-effective and reliable forms of conservation.

The Waldron Conservation Project exemplifies what good conservation practices can look like. Composed primarily of native habitat, the Waldron Ranch is an area of incredible diversity, rich history and spectacular scenery. Conservation and productive ranching have always worked together at the Waldron. To ensure this would be true in perpetuity, in 2013 NCC and the Waldron Grazing Co-Op agreed to the terms of a conservation agreement. In the decade since, the ranch and NCC's relationship with the co-op have thrived. NCC is building on this success with a project at Bob Creek Ranch, an adjacent Prairie grasslands property.

Shedding light on the grasslands

We have one last opportunity in the Prairies to ensure that our grasslands' plants and animals continue to thrive, thanks to generations of stewardship by the people who have lived in, worked on and cared for these grasslands. It is imperative that Canadians recognize the significance of this landscape, and the value that these grassland champions have provided to all of us, and that we find ways to ensure such efforts are supported.

In 2024, NCC launched the Prairie Grasslands Action Plan to conserve 500,000 hectares of Prairie grasslands by 2030. NCC works to protect land with the goal of supporting continued use, whether industry or recreational, in compatibility with conservation principles. This approach balances promoting livelihoods and recreation while addressing the twin crises of biodiversity loss and climate change. We all have a role to play in raising awareness of the importance of these places, and we need everyone at the table to help ensure their future, so that these working landscapes continue to work for everyone.

Jeremy Hogan is NCC's Director of Prairie Grassland Conservation, overseeing the Prairie Grasslands Action Plan as well as NCC's work within the Weston Family Prairie Grasslands Initiative.

Jeremy holds an MA in anthropology (primatology) and a BSc in biology, and was fortunate to work in wildlife research with the University of Calgary for many years.

Through this work he experienced first-hand the importance and efficacy of land-based conservation initiatives, and was thrilled to join NCC in 2022 to further such efforts. A born and raised Calgarian, Jeremy loves any excuse to get outside, whether hiking, cycling, skiing (cross-country and downhill), or just letting the kids run around!

Seeking the Court's Opinion, Advice and Direction

In Ontario, testators can execute more than one will, thereby creating a more complicated estate plan. The advantage of estate planning in this way is that typically only assets in the primary estate will need to be probated and be subject to estate administration tax. Even though secondary wills are not probated, parties may still seek the court's opinion, advice, and direction regarding these testamentary instruments, as demonstrated by Justice Valente's recent decision in Kurt v Kurt and Sullivan, 2023 ONSC 6599.

In this case, two spouses died within a month and a half of each other, leaving behind four wills in total. First the husband passed away, leaving a primary will and a secondary will. 42 days later, the wife died, also leaving a primary will and a secondary will.

One of the couple's daughters applied to the court for direction regarding a bequest left to her in the husband's secondary will worth $800,000. The daughter had already inherited a bequest worth $800,000 from the wife's secondary estate, composed of a property in Kitchener worth $422,750, plus a cash bequest of $377,250. Both the wife's secondary will and the husband's secondary will contained essentially the same bequest for the daughter – that she was to receive $800,000, minus the value of the Kitchener property “being transferred to her” through another will clause. The daughter claimed that she was entitled to a further $800,000 from the husband's secondary estate.

The daughter's application was opposed; other parties interested in the husband's estate argued that the $800,000 bequest was intended to be a gift-over that would only be honoured if the husband was predeceased by his wife. Because the wife had survived the husband by more than 30 days, they argued that the wife inherited the entire residue of the husband's secondary estate.

The court application was also necessary because there were a number of drafting errors in the husband's secondary will. For example, the secondary will did not dispose of the residue of the husband's secondary estate. Rather, both the husband's primary will and his secondary will disposed of the residue of his primary estate, leaving it to the wife. Notwithstanding this drafting error, all of the parties agreed that the wife was the proper recipient of the residue of the husband's secondary estate.

There was also a drafting error in the will clause containing the $800,000 bequest to the daughter from the husband's secondary estate. While the clause indicated that the bequest was to be made up of cash and a property being transferred to the daughter pursuant to another will clause, the will clause referenced therein disposed of the residue of the husband's primary estate and did not dispose of the

Ian M Hull,
Co-founder, Hull & Hull, LLP

Kitchener property. The will clause disposing of the Kitchener property was actually located in the husband's primary will, rather than the secondary will, and only left the property to the daughter if the wife did not survive the husband for 30 days.

Due to the errors in the husband's secondary will, Justice Valente held that it was appropriate to read both the primary will and the secondary will together, as one, to determine the husband's testamentary intentions. In reaching this conclusion, Justice Valente relied on Justice Patillo's decision in Lipson v Lipson, 2009 CanLII 66904 (Ont. S.C.J.), another case dealing with primary and secondary wills, where the court found that it was appropriate to read both a primary will and a secondary will together as one when there are apparent mistakes in one of the wills, read on its own.

Reading both the primary will and the secondary will together, Justice Valente concluded that the husband's secondary will did not accurately express his intention. Since the Kitchener property was not transferred to the daughter by the husband's primary estate, the court held that the will clause with the $800,000 bequest was inoperative. The husband had intended to leave both his primary and secondary estates to his wife, should she survive him for more than thirty days, and only intended the legacy to the daughter to be

Cancer Research Works, Owen is Living Proof

Owen was a typical kid in Grade 10. His days were spent hanging with friends, gaming, and playing with his dog, Ronald. Owen was also an elite volleyball player, who was always training and perfecting his skills.

So when he first noticed the lump on his thigh, Owen assumed it was a sports injury. It wasn't. It was Hodgkin lymphoma. A follow-up scan showed the cancer cells had already spread to his neck.

Why don't we have a cure yet?

We haven't discovered a "cure" for cancer because cancer is a complex disease. But thanks to research, many types of cancer now have significantly better outcomes than they did just a few years ago.

Although not every discovery is headline news, breakthroughs are happening all the time. Because they tend to come in small increments, they may not appear to have a direct impact on patient care or outcomes. Make no mistake: these discoveries absolutely do increase our understanding of the 200+ diseases we call cancer, even if they're not "eureka" moments for people outside the scientific community.

Each new bit of information adds another rung to the ladder leading us to faster, more precise detection, diagnoses, and treatments. Lymphoma is one of those success stories.

Lymphomas begin in the lymphatic system (an essential part of the body's disease-fighting immune system) when healthy cells mutate and grow out of control. Researchers are exploring novel ways to harness the immune system to destroy cancer cells.

For example, immune cells can be harvested from the patient, genetically modified to recognize a specific protein on the cancer cell, then put back into the body to find and kill those cells. Twenty years ago, this might have sounded like science fiction.

Today, it's called immunotherapy and it's one of the most promising areas in cancer research. That said, it doesn't work with every patient or with every cancer. Researchers like Dr. Laura Evgin want to know why.

Dr. Evgin is an early-career scientist at BC Cancer Research Institute and an assistant professor at the University of British Columbia.

"There's so much excitement around this immunotherapy. And clinically, it's been very effective," says Dr. Evgin. "However, there are many patients who fail to respond."

Dr. Evgin recently received a $450,000 Terry Fox New Investigator Award to study why some patients fail to respond to this therapy, particularly in cases where the cancer cells have spread beyond the lymph nodes.

Whatever Dr. Evgin discovers, it will add more rungs to the ladder of our understanding not just of lymphomas,

Owen, Terry's Team Member and cancer survivor but of leveraging immunotherapy as a way to treat other cancers, too.

An investment in hope and healing

In the meantime, thanks to this kind of pioneering research, the survival rate for Hodgkin lymphoma has increased more than 26% since 1975. Today, if you're under the age of 50 at diagnosis, your 5-year survival rate is more than 95%.¹

In Owen's case, it's been almost three years since his diagnosis. The first year was especially rough. His treatments were exhausting with gruelling chemotherapy sessions that sometimes lasted the entire day. In addition to all the needles (Owen hates needles), there were countless pills to swallow. He developed painful canker sores. And he quickly lost his hair. Owen jokes, "Fortunately, I have a nicely shaped head and a good selection of toques!" In a poignant show of solidarity, Owen's dad and his best friend shaved their heads.

"I was especially worried that I'd fall behind in school," Owen remembers. But he persevered, in part because he was inspired by Terry Fox.

"Terry was a superhero. Many give up when things get tough, but Terry didn't." Owen didn't either. "I knew that I had to get strong and keep up with the treatments, no matter what."

This past spring, Owen graduated high school. He started playing volleyball again. And in September, he headed off to university to study political science and law. “Saul Goodman, from ‘Better Call Saul’ is one of my favourite TV characters. He inspired me,” laughs Owen.

Asked how cancer has changed him and his family, Owen is candid. “We received so much kindness when I was sick. Now, we try not to sweat the small stuff. And we give back with random acts of kindness and donations to charities like the Terry Fox Foundation so the research can continue.”

The team scraped snow from polar bear tracks in Alaska and sent the samples back to MIX's lab in Sweden. There, for the first time, they successfully isolated and sequenced trace amounts of eDNA from the cells' nuclei. From 13 sets of polar bear tracks, they sequenced enough eDNA to identify 12 individual bears (the 13th sample turned out to be from a bear whose tracks were collected on two separate days).

Unlike conventional research methods, which require more contact with polar bears, collecting eDNA from snow samples allows researchers to obtain crucial data without disturbing or even needing to see the bears. With some training, non-scientists can also collect footprints, which means that Indigenous and local community members, volunteers, hunters and trackers can help monitor and manage polar bears. Collecting footprints can also complement existing monitoring efforts and enable researchers to study polar bear subpopulations that we currently know less about.

In addition, this new method can shed light on movement and genetic exchange between areas, mating systems, behaviours and bears' ability to adapt to climate change—information that is essential for polar bear management and conservation.

The team has also used the method successfully on lynx and snow leopards, and hopes it can be used to monitor other species that leave footprints in the snow, expanding our knowledge of diverse ecosystems.

paid and for the Kitchener property to be transferred to her in the event that the wife did not survive him.

This conclusion was also supported by the language used in the $800,000 bequest, which referred to the Kitchener property “being transferred” to the daughter. Justice Valente held that this phrase made it clear that the daughter was only to receive the $800,000 legacy from the husband's secondary estate if the Kitchener property was also transferred to her under his primary will. Since the daughter did not inherit the Kitchener property from the husband, the $800,000 bequest failed.

The court's decision in this case is useful in confirming that the court has the power to provide direction regarding a will, even if it is not submitted to probate, and also provides guidance as to how to approach the interpretation of multiple wills. If there is an error in either the primary will or the secondary will, they are both to be read together as one to determine the testator's intent, similar to how a will is to be read as a whole when interpreting a specific will clause.

Thrift Store Manager Shares Her Salvation Army Journey

A few years ago, Nicole Ryder found herself in a difficult situation. Despite being fully employed, she was unable to find an affordable place to rent, which led her to live out of her car. At the same time, she was five months pregnant and felt the pressure to secure a safe shelter for her baby. Fortunately, with the assistance of The Salvation Army in High River, Alta., she not only found housing and food support but also a job opportunity.

Nicole had consistently sought support from different organizations and food banks. It wasn't until someone suggested she called the Army, that her situation changed.

"I was defeated because I had heard 'no' so many times. I came into The Salvation Army with no high hopes, but they were so non-judgmental, so open and caring," Nicole shares.

As soon as she connected with The Salvation Army, they helped her find an apartment.

"I was terrified of having my baby and not having a roof over my head, so them giving me that hand up was huge," she adds.

Additional Support

When Nicole moved in, she realized that she had little money left over for groceries until her next paycheque. She did not know what to do. Nicole knew The Salvation Army had food support programs, but she was unsure if they would assist her again.

"When I walked through the door, I was greeted with open arms and they knew who I was. They were there to help, and it took away that embarrassing feeling that I had walking in. They made me feel like I was part of a family. They talked to me, asked me how things went getting into my new place. They really cared," Nicole says.

The staff helped Nicole register for the food bank, which she says covered more than the basics. She was set up with a two-week supply of groceries, which helped her stay afloat until her next payday. The food assistance she received allowed her to have her kitchen cabinets replenished.

Nicole believes that had it not been for the Army's help, she might have not been able to afford to have her child in her care.

"I would have had nothing."

Nicole Ryder,
Salvation Army Store Manager

A Fresh Opportunity

A couple of years after initially connecting with The Salvation Army, Nicole was presented with the perfect opportunity to become part of the organization that helped her. The High River Salvation Army Thrift Store had an opening for an assistant manager position. Nicole had previous retail managerial experience, so she applied and was hired.

"I'm able to give back that compassion that I received."

Today, she is the store manager and believes the job has served as a way for her to thank the Army for their support.

"I'm able to give back that compassion that I received because I am part of The Salvation Army now. I can give back by helping somebody feel better about themselves or their situation by giving them a hand up, whether it be encouraging words or helping them with clothing," Nicole says.

Lessons Charities Can Learn From Mr. Rogers

It's a beautiful day in this neighbourhood, a beautiful day for a neighbour. Would you be mine?"

A classic singsong etched in the minds of generations is more than just a catchy tune; it also acts as a lesson that is fundamental to the existence of Canadian charities. Mr. Rogers encouraged us to build relationships with our neighbours, and that is exactly what we need to do to ensure that communities thrive. It's more than just a nicety: data has indicated a correlation between how connected we are with one another and our levels of generosity within our communities – and that includes donations to charities.

In this year's edition of The Giving Report from CanadaHelps, we introduced readers to Jessica, a 32-year-old millennial who lives in a small condo, which she shares with her roommate, in the heart of a bustling city. Jessica works from home and joined her current company in the midst of the pandemic, so she has had very few opportunities to meet her colleagues in person to build bonds and get to know them on a personal level. When it comes to causes that Jessica cares about, she is passionate and concerned about the devastating effects of climate change, but she doesn't do much to turn anxiety into action. She doesn't attend protests, she doesn't give to environmental charities, and she doesn't volunteer.

Our connections and social bonds with one another are contracting, which is affecting how we engage with the world around us.

Jessica is a composite of a wide swath of Canadians in our research and is highlighted in The Giving Report this year because she is a symptom of a greater trend that is taking place across the country: our connections and social bonds with one another are contracting, which is affecting how we engage with the world around us.

From 2013 to 2022, there was a 40% drop in the number of Canadians who reported having six or more close friends. There was also a drop in the number of Canadians who have a strong sense of belonging to their communities, as well as a decline in the number of Canadians who report knowing their neighbours.

Where things get interesting is when we merge this data with giving patterns. Among Canadians who report having zero or one close friend, 53% report making a financial donation to charities, while those who report having two to 10 close friends all give at a higher rate. Sixty-one percent of those with two to four friends, 76% of those with five to six close friends, and 84% of those with seven to 10 friends all report making financial donations to charities. The only anomaly is among Canadians who report having more than 10 close friends, who gave at a lower rate (69%) than those with five or six (76%) close friends or seven to 10 close friends (84%), but at a higher rate than those with zero to one close friends (53%) or two to four close friends (61%).

Among overall giving trends, charities are seeing fewer and fewer Canadians give. Tax-filer data from 2010 reported that 23.4% of Canadians gave to charities. By 2021, the number of Canadians claiming charitable tax receipts on their income tax dropped to 17.7%.

Although there are limitations to the use of tax-filer data, it points to a worrisome decline that needs to be put into reverse. The overreliance on fewer Canadians to open up their pocket-books, write hefty cheques – or in 2024 terms, tap their phones – is a threat to the nation's charities, and by extension, the entire social fabric of communities across the country.

While our connections to one another are an important factor in this decline, it's not the only reason behind these trends. Other reasons include economic uncertainty and the ongoing affordability crisis, in addition to declining religiosity, changing giving patterns among young Canadians, and donors not feeling that their gifts are making an impact due to a lack of information.

These are broad issues that are beyond the control of any individual person or charity, but there are steps we can take to drive change. Here are four ways that your charity can take action:

1. Building communities, one conversation at a time

Rome wasn't built in a day, and neither were communities. It's going to take time to build back and build better connections with one another to ensure that our communities thrive, leaning into the lessons taught to us by Mr. Rogers.

Every opportunity there is to bring people together should be leveraged.

For charities, this means that every opportunity there is to bring people together should be leveraged. Bring your team and supporters together for events or in-person gatherings to cultivate the communities around you and ensure that bonds are built so everyone can feel like they belong.

2. Communicating success and impact is key

If you don't share your impact, your supporters won't know about it – it's as simple as that.

The Giving Report highlights how 20% of Canadians who previously gave to environmental charities stopped because they doubted the effectiveness of their donations. No matter the cause, charities must leverage data and stories and keep supporters updated in terms of both the challenges they can help you tackle and the impact that they are going to have when they give. This will not only highlight how successful your organization is; it will also provide your supporters hope, which is critical.

It's important to leverage the success and impact of your organization to give supporters hope and a desire to support your mission.

The report also highlights that 18% of Canadians who are very hopeful for Canada's future donated to environmental charities. Among Canadians who identify with feelings of hopelessness toward Canada's future, only 1% donated to environmental charities. While these two examples are focused on environmental causes, we can extrapolate these findings and apply them to other causes. It's important to leverage the success and impact of your organization to give supporters hope and a desire to support your mission.

3. Reduce barriers to entry

We need to examine how supporters make their first interactions with our organizations. If your charity is asking only for money, a supporter's financial situation may be standing in the way of their making their first gift. Instead, encourage both financial donations and other ways to get involved like volunteering, advocating on behalf of your organization, or sharing their knowledge and expertise in a specific area.

A non-monetary way of supporting your organization can strengthen the relationship with your supporters and lower the barrier to entry.

While financial support is undoubtedly important, a non-monetary way of supporting your organization can strengthen the relationship with your supporters and lower the barrier to entry. Broader involvement can help supporters see the impact of your organization's work and may open doors for financial donations when they have more disposable income in their bank accounts.

4. Get proactive

For many charities responding to emerging needs or crises such as providing humanitarian relief, distributing emergency shelter services, or funding mental health therapy or emergency food banks, it can often feel like there is not enough time to focus on prevention or systemic change.

Consider ways of soliciting longer-term support for your charity by explaining how supporters can help prevent or reduce the emergent burden in the first place.

While fundraising for immediate needs for urgent situations is critical, consider ways of soliciting longer-term support for your charity by explaining to supporters how they can help prevent or reduce the emergent burden in the first place.

For example, Michael Bernstein, the executive director of Clean Prosperity, suggests that when fundraising for urgent relief like a wildfire, encourage donors to increase their gift to help fund solution-focused work, such as advocating for policies to proactively tackle climate change.

We all have the power as leaders in Canada's charitable sector to take steps toward the change we want to see. Like Mr. Rogers taught a generation of kids, understanding the unique value that each of us offers is what makes communities strong, and strong communities help us all.

TRIBUTE

A Postscript From The Publisher...

I would be remiss as Publisher if this edition of the Canadian Donors Guide did not recognize and note the many contributions of Paul Nazareth to the Canadian charitable sector and the people within the sector.

Paul is the ultimate in 'giving' -- of himself, his time and his sage advice to charities, gift planners and all those who are linked to them. As an advisor and educator to charities and their staff, Paul's knowledge, strategic acuity and mental agility have combined to benefit so many for so many years. Paul's bold presence and spirited personality lifted everyone in the room (or online as necessary), modelling the gratitude for the opportunities presented to him and that he - without hesitation - shared with others. That takes boundless enthusiasm for the charitable arena and energy; it's also mentally and physically draining, to which many, including myself, can no doubt attest.

In my case, Paul was on the receiving end of requests for advice, information, support and, most importantly, encouragement when I succeeded this publication's previous owner/publisher, Anderson Charters of Third Sector Publishing and the founder of the Donor's Guide before him, Roy Abrahamson.

Even in my early days working for Anderson on the Canadian Donor's Guide, Paul was there to help. He represented one of our valued advertisers back then and was very supportive of our efforts. When he transitioned to working in the financial world, he was still interacting and supporting the efforts of Anderson and his team. I recall that at one point, Paul travelled up to Anderson's offices in downtown Orillia, to teach us all about social media and advise us how best to use it for our purposes.

When Paul transitioned to Vice President of Education & Development at the Canadian Association of Gift Planners (CAGP), I was the new owner and publisher of the Canadian Donor's Guide after having worked with Anderson starting with the 2007 edition. Paul was always a great supporter of the Donor's Guide but with his position at the CAGP he was able to provide us with his words to share on these pages. He allowed us to use his photo and quotes in our promotional materials, which was very much appreciated. If you are reading this you know what an impact Paul has made in the charitable sector and how much weight his opinion has.

But it wasn't the words, photo or quotes that meant the most. It was Paul's ongoing support of the Donor's Guide wherever life took him. From his position in the charity world, in the financial world, and in his personal world, Paul not only talked the talk about the Canadian Donor's Guide, he also walked the walk. Paul believes in what we try to do with our annual publication and he shared that belief with others across the country.

So, when I read and confirmed, after the 2024 CAGP Conference, that Paul was leaving his position at CAGP, I was happy to learn that he was going to concentrate on his health.

I am glad that Paul Nazareth had the courage to recognize his needs and take this pause for 'real life' to take priority. That is yet another learning opportunity from our friend and colleague.

Although Paul will be missed by many in his role with the CAGP, he will share his time, thoughts and advice when he can. Paul is ultimately an educator, a networker and friend to many. This will not change because his title has changed.

By the way, his new title is the Generosity Guy. I think this is a very appropriate handle for Paul. In my eyes he has always been the best example of generosity to other people.

Thank you, Paul. We wish you all the best as your venture down this new path and look forward to our paths crossing again.

NOTE 1:

Most organizations are categorized by their primary activity. Some appear in more than one category when their activities are extremely varied in nature.

Please refer to "Purpose" in the main listing for more information on the activities of a specific organization.

NOTE 2:

Many organizations with Revenue Canada Charitable Registration Numbers are not active fundraisers or are supported mainly by their respective members.

The following list illustrates the kind of organizations that are less likely to appear in the Donor's Guide.

- Government departments and agencies
- Public schools and their boards
- Professional and industrial associations
- Community service clubs

Additionally, where there are many local, regional and national bodies related in some way and/or are all concerned with the same work, local organizations have generally not been included separately. It is suggested that you contact the appropriate regional or national office of such multi-branch organizations to locate a particular, local group of interest to you.

NOTE 1:

La majorité des organismes sont classés par leur activité principale. Certains organismes apparaissent dans plus d'une catégorie lorsque leurs activités sont de nature très différentes.

Pour plus d'informations sur les activités d'un organisme, se reporter à « But » dans la liste principale.

NOTE 2:

Plusieurs organismes avec un numéro d'enregistrement de charité à Revenu Canada ne collectent pas de fonds de façon active ou sont supportés principalement par leurs membres respectifs.

La liste suivante présente les types d'organismes qui n'apparaissent que très peu dans le guide:

- Départements et agences gouvernementaux
- Ecoles publiques et leurs conseils d'administration
- Associations professionnelles et industrielles
- Clubs de services communautaires

De plus, comme il y a plusieurs organismes locaux, régionaux et nationaux connexes et/ou qui sont intéressés par le même travail, les organismes locaux ne sont généralement pas inclus dans le guide. Nous vous suggérons de contacter le bureau régional ou national de l'organisme désiré afin de trouver un groupe local particulier.

Purpose: One in two Albertans will be diagnosed with cancer in their lifetime. Donor support to the Alberta Cancer Foundation brings life-saving treatments to Albertans sooner, improves the patient experience at every cancer centre in the province and attracts the best and brightest in research and care. Together, we are creating more hope and more moments for Albertans facing cancer, ensuring no one faces cancer alone.

TEPs are full members of the Society of Trust and Estate Practitioners (STEP). STEP members are highly knowledgeable in offering domestic and international advice on trusts and estates, including planning, administration, and related tax issues. They help families plan for their futures, providing expert level guidance when it comes to making significant life decisions. Clients turn to STEP members for direction following the death of a partner; ensuring elderly and vulnerable relatives are cared for; safely passing a family business from one generation to the next; and helping clients to support charitable causes in an effective way.

A LEGACY OF PROTECTING HUMAN RIGHTS

A voice for the silenced. A champion for the vulnerable. A protector of human rights for generations to come. That's the kind of difference your clients can make when they choose to become Human Rights Guardians.

By leaving a gift in their Will to Amnesty International or naming us as an insurance policy beneficiary, your clients can help ensure that the world their children and grandchildren inherit is one where everyone is treated equally and with dignity.

Organisme de bienfaisance no 13196 9628 RR0001

But: Fondée en 1918, l'Association des Amputés de guerre offre des programmes en constante évolution. D'abord vouée aux anciens combattants amputés, elle aide aujourd'hui l'ensemble des personnes amputées, y compris les enfants. En faisant un don testamentaire, vous perpétuez l'œuvre des anciens combattants amputés et financez nos programmes essentiels destinés aux personnes amputées à travers le pays. Le Programme LES VAINQUEURS, notamment, procure aux enfants amputés une aide diversifiée, dont de l'aide financière pour leurs membres artificiels, afin qu'ils puissent mener une vie active et autonome. Grâce à votre appui, les programmes de l'association poursuivront leur essor. L'organisme ne reçoit aucune subvention gouvernementale.

incredible legacy.
No matter the size,
every gift in Will helps to extinguish
the fire of arthritis.

Purpose: BC & Alberta Guide Dogs is a registered charity that breeds, raises and trains Guide Dogs for individuals who are blind or have low vision, Autism Service Dogs for children with autism and their families, and OSI-PTSD Service Dogs for Veterans and First Responders. Guide Dogs, Autism Service Dogs and OSI-PTSD Service Dogs increase independence, mobility, safety, confidence and support, and are provided to clients living in British Columbia and Alberta FREE OF CHARGE. The organization relies on the generosity of donors to cover the $35,000 cost to produce each professionally-trained dog.

Purpose: For over 30 years, Brown Bagging for Calgary's Kids has provided food to youth who do not arrive at school with the food they need to succeed. We are currently supplying nutritious lunches to more than 7,000 kids each school day in over 230 schools across Calgary. We have also expanded our impact to support kids and families outside of school. Our vision is a future where communities ensure no kids go hungry; our mission is to inspire people to take meaningful action to feed and care for kids.

Charitable Registration # 88846 0441 RR0001

Purpose: Bruyère is Eastern Ontario's leading health organization specializing in aging, rehabilitation, and care for those with multiple complex medical conditions. We bring together compassionate, person-centred care with world-class research to maximize quality of life for those we care for and their loved ones. Bruyère has a proven history of addressing gaps in our health system with compassion, innovation, and courage. Today, as an academic health sciences centre, we are training the next generation of health professionals to see—and take action on—creating a better health system for all. This work is enhanced by our Foundation that shares our story and raises funds with the support of our generous community.

Purpose: Canadian Blood Services is a not-for-profit charitable organization. We are responsible for operating an accessible, reliable and sustainable system of life essentials for transfusion and transplantation on behalf of all provincial and territorial governments, excluding Quebec. As a registered charity, we rely on the generosity of financial donors to help us do more to serve patients by strengthening our national programs for blood, plasma, stem cells and organs and tissue donations and to help fuel research and innovation. Financial donors play an integral role in connecting patients with the blood products they need where and when they need them most. Together with our supporters we will help every patient, match every need and serve every Canadian.

Purpose: The Red Cross is one of Canada's largest humanitarian organizations that aid in creating resilience and survival during and after devastating natural disasters, conflicts and epidemics. With vital support from Canadian donors and the compassionate service of thousands of skilled volunteers, the Canadian Red Cross, for over 125 years, has continued to save lives by offering relief, assistance and support, working alongside local colleagues to provide life-saving care for those affected, injured and sick. We provide innovative care and services to alleviate human suffering.

Your Legacy can Change the Future

By creating your legacy to support the future work of the Canadian Wildlife Federation, you can help CWF continue its critical conservation work and education programs without affecting your current finances or financial plans.

There are many ways to create a Legacy Gift in your estate planning, allowing you to choose the one that is best for you.

Make this decisive act to conserve Canadian wildlife and its habitat far into the future.

Compassion. Connection. Community.

Leave a legacy of hope for people who experience mental health challenges. Through prevention and early intervention, our award-winning, evidence-based wellness programs make a difference!

Founded as a charity in 2002, Cinim provides education and research in wellness and integrative medicine. Our mental wellness programs promote overall health, with a positive impact on individuals, families, and communities. A gift in your will helps us continue to provide programs to those who need support.

Contact Heather Thomas, Executive Director at 403.220.0022 ext. 3 or h.thomas@cinim.org. Visit cinim.org to learn more and to view our film produced by BBC StoryWorks Commercial Productions.

Give to a better future

Your bequest today can change someone else's tomorrow

When someone loses their sight, their life can change in many ways. They may have to give up their job or turn over their driver's license. They'll have to learn to adapt to doing everyday tasks without the help of sight. And they'll need to come to terms with the emotional challenges of sight loss as sunshine, colours, and the faces of their loved ones begin to fade from view. You can help.

By making a gift in your will to the CNIB Foundation, you'll ensure people in your community have the support they need to move forward with confidence after losing their sight, and continue to live the lives they choose.

Call Cindi Meyer, Director of Planned Giving, at 1-800-563-2642 or email cindi.meyer@cnib.ca to learn more about creating a gift in your will.

But: Nous sommes la plus grande ONG environnementale au Canada, et notre contribution est d'une ampleur inégalée. Nous protégeons la nature et en prenons soin afin de stopper la disparition d'espèces et de lutter contre les changements climatiques. Nous choisissons l'action. Nous travaillons sur le terrain, en bâtissant des écosystèmes sains et résilients là où c'est le plus important. Et l'impact de notre travail est mondial. La collaboration est au cœur de notre identité. Nous rallions les gens pour protéger la nature, afin qu'elle puisse nous protéger en retour. Ensemble, nous avons déjà conservé plus de 15 millions d'hectares, et nous comptons doubler notre impact. Car ce que nous faisons aujourd'hui compte plus que jamais.

METTEZ VOTRE PASSION AU CŒUR DE VOTRE HÉRITAGE

Votre passion pour les espaces naturels qui nous entourent est au cœur de votre vie. Et maintenant, vous pouvez en faire votre héritage. Un don testamentaire à Conservation de la nature Canada, quel que soit le montant, vous permet de contribuer à la protection de nos habitats les plus vulnérables et de la faune qu'ils abritent. Pour aujourd'hui, pour demain, et pour les générations à venir.

Leave a legacy of hope for youth experiencing homelessness

Since 1982, Covenant House Toronto has supported more than 100,000 youth to ignite their potential and reclaim their lives. As Canada's largest agency serving youth who are homeless, trafficked or at risk, we offer the widest range of services to support hundreds of young people that walk through our doors every day.

More than a place to stay, Covenant House Toronto provides life-changing care with unconditional love and respect. We offer housing options, access to healthcare and well-being support, training and skills development, and ongoing care once youth move into the community.

A gift in your Will ensures we can continue helping young people by providing them with a safe space to heal, grow and move forward towards a better future. It is a simple and powerful way to make a significant impact while offering financial benefits to you and your family.

Un don par testament est un geste d'une grande humanité pour les générations futures confrontées à des crises.

Depuis plus de 125 ans, la Croix-Rouge canadienne aide les personnes en situation de crise. Grâce au soutien des donatrices et donateurs canadiens, nous continuerons de nous mobiliser pour les décennies à venir.

Lorsque les gens incluent un don à la Croix-Rouge dans leur testament, leur générosité se traduit par de la nourriture, un abri ou un réconfort indispensable pour soutenir les personnes confrontées à de futures crises, ici au Canada et dans le monde entier.

Léguer un héritage humanitaire durable aux prochaines générations par l'intermédiaire de la Croix-Rouge canadienne. Accédez à nos ressources gratuites, y compris un guide de planification testamentaire, une brochure sur les dons testamentaires et des exemples de clauses testamentaires.

But: Bruyère est l'organisme de santé de premier plan de l'est de l'Ontario qui se spécialise dans le vieillissement, la réadaptation et les soins aux personnes atteintes de multimorbidités complexes. Chez Bruyère, nous allions la compassion et les soins centrés sur la personne à la recherche de classe mondiale, afin de maximiser la qualité de vie des personnes qui nous confient leurs soins et leurs proches. Bruyère sait depuis fort longtemps mettre à profit sa compassion, son innovation et son courage, afin de pallier les lacunes qui existent dans le réseau de la santé. Aujourd'hui, au sein de notre centre universitaire des sciences de la santé, nous formons la prochaine génération de professionnels de la santé pour apporter notre pierre à l'édification d'un meilleur système de santé pour tous. Ce travail est renforcé par la Fondation Bruyère, qui fait connaître notre histoire et recueille des fonds grâce au soutien de nos généreux concitoyens.

But: La Fondation INCA qui a fêté ses 100 ans d'existence en 2018 est un organisme sans but lucratif qui vise à changer ce que cela veut dire que d'être aveugle. Nous fournissons des programmes innovateurs et des initiatives de défense des droits qui amènent les personnes touchées par la cécité à réaliser leurs rêves en éliminant les barrières pour favoriser l'inclusion.

Notre action est alimentée par un réseau de bénévoles, de donateurs et de partenaires d'un océan à l'autre. Pour en savoir plus ou pour participer, visitez le site inca.ca.

Donnez pour un avenir meilleur

Votre legs aujourd'hui peut changer l'avenir de quelqu'un d'autre demain.

Lorsqu'une personne perd la vue, sa vie peut changer à bien des égards. Elle peut être obligée d'abandonner son emploi ou de rendre son permis de conduire. Elle devra apprendre à s'adapter aux tâches quotidiennes sans l'aide de la vue. Et elle devra faire face aux défis émotionnels de la perte de vision, alors que le soleil, les couleurs et les visages de ses proches commencent à disparaître. Vous pouvez aider.

En faisant un don par testament à la Fondation INCA, vous vous assurez que les personnes de votre collectivité bénéficient du soutien dont elles ont besoin pour aller de l'avant avec confiance après avoir perdu la vue et continuer à vivre la vie qu'elles ont choisie.

416 COMMUNITY SUPPORT FOR WOMEN

Great exposure. But where is the information? Who are they? What do they do? What are their goals? Where can I find out more about them? Who is the person to contact?

It's a start.

Next time, consider a descriptive listing.

Great exposure. But where is the information? Who are they? What do they do? What are their goals? Where can I find out more about them? Who is the person to contact?

It's a start.

But: Mercy Ships Canada a réfléchi à la question de l'héritage et investi dans l'avenir des soins de santé. Mercy Ships déploie ses navires hôpitaux dirigés par des bénévoles qualifiés pour fournir des opérations chirurgicales de première classe, renforcer les capacités médicales et favoriser le développement durable des pays ayant un accès limité aux soins chirurgicaux. Ses programmes apportent un soutien global aux pays qui s'efforcent de rendre les soins de santé accessibles à tous. Mercy Ships utilise le navire hôpital civil le plus grand au monde, le Global Mercy, ainsi que le Africa Mercy.

Purpose: Located in East Toronto, Michael Garron Hospital serves one of the most diverse areas in Canada. Our team provides great care and compassion to patients at some of life's most crucial moments, from welcoming a new baby to offering dignity at the end-of-life. Everyone who comes through our doors is treated like a neighbour. Because to us, they truly are. Donors help ensure the health and well-being of 400,000 people in our community, as well as others from surrounding areas who seek our skill and expertise.

Purpose: We're Canada's largest environmental charity, delivering results at a scale like no other. We protect and care for nature to stop species loss and counter climate change. We take action. We work on the land, building healthy and resilient ecosystems where it matters most. And the impact of our work is global. Collaboration is at the heart of who we are. We bring people together to protect nature, so it can protect us. Together, we've conserved more than 15 million hectares and we're on a mission to double our impact, because what we do next matters more than ever. With a gift in your Will to NCC, you can help protect Canada's natural heritage for generations to come.

Purpose: Operation Smile is a volunteer-based global medical charity that provides free surgery and comprehensive care to children born with cleft conditions in low- and middle-income countries. Cleft lip and palate make breathing, eating, drinking, and speaking difficult, which can be life-threatening. Together with our 6,000+ medical volunteers and generous partners, we create new smiles and transform lives in 35 countries around the world.

CAGP WORKS FOR YOU

CAGP is the only Canadian professional association that brings together professional advisors with fundraisers to learn, collaborate and network.

FOR PROFESSIONAL ADVISORS

Philanthropy is good for business. It is the glue that binds client's loyalty to you by extending financial success to social significance. CAGP helps you improve your value to clients through advanced philanthropic planning advice.

FOR FUNDRAISING & FINANCE STAFF AT CHARITIES

As fundraising gets more engaged in financial, tax and estate planning, ensure your fundraising and finance team are trained in the most current strategies, trends and changes to charity law.

FOR SENIOR DECISION MAKERS

Our best-in-class educational offerings will help you better understand how to initiate and manage a strategic fundraising program. Connect with other senior leaders, fundraisers and professional advisors with our network of Chapters across Canada.

Membership in CAGP brings a suite of tangible assets, tools and products that make membership in CAGP a modest investment with real value.

Purpose: We are a Christian charity in Toronto, offering support and provisions for struggling neighbours—the homeless, low-income individuals and families, and children and youth. Programs and services include hot meals, clothing, groceries, 24/7 men's shelter, counselling, support groups, life skills training, Bible studies, and more. We also run a childcare centre and serve children and youth through after-school programs, a summer camp, mentorship, and leadership training.

But: La Société canadienne du sang est un organisme de bienfaisance sans but lucratif. Elle assure l'accessibilité, la fiabilité et la durabilité du système qui fournit les produits biologiques essentiels à la transfusion et à la transplantation au nom des gouvernements des provinces et des territoires, sauf le Québec. En tant qu'organisme de bienfaisance enregistré, elle compte sur la contribution des donateurs pour financer la recherche et l'innovation, et renforcer les programmes nationaux axés sur le sang, les cellules souches, les organes et les tissus. Les donateurs jouent un rôle primordial dans cette chaîne de vie qui, en tout temps, fait le lien entre les patients et les produits sanguins dont ils ont besoin. Forts de la générosité de nos donateurs, nous réaliserons notre vision : aider chaque patient, couvrir chaque besoin et servir chaque Canadien.

Purpose: Spinal Cord Injury BC (SCI BC) helps people with spinal cord injuries and related physical disabilities adjust, adapt and thrive in their new lives, whether they are dealing with a new injury or struggling with the ongoing challenges of living and aging with a physical disability. Through our three core programs (Peer Support, Information Services, Access BC), we provide answers, social connections, educational opportunities and unique life experiences for people living with spinal cord injury, while helping to make the province more accessible for everyone.

Purpose: When you support St. Boniface Hospital Foundation, you make amazing things happen. Your kindness powers compassionate patient care and innovative research in the heart of Manitoba. Western Canada's first hospital grew from just four beds to Manitoba's second-largest hospital with global-calibre medical and research expertise thanks to donor support. From performing Manitoba's first open-heart surgery in 1959 to opening the country's first free-standing research facility in 1987, and bringing the first Hybrid Operating Room to our province in 2022, we have a proven track record of working with our community to fund remarkable innovations in patient care and medical research at St. Boniface Hospital.

Purpose: Since its founding in 1918, The War Amps has grown from assisting war amputees – whom we still serve – to all amputees, including adults and children. A charitable estate donation in your will honours the legacy of war amputees and funds our essential programs for amputees across Canada, such as our Child Amputee (CHAMP) Program. CHAMP provides comprehensive support, including financial assistance for artificial limbs, to allow children to lead independent and active lives. With your help, our programs will carry on long into the future. The War Amps does not receive government grants.

Ecological Gifts:

A Legacy for Tomorrow, a Tax Break Today

Do you own land that contains natural habitat, such as a forest, prairie, wetland or shoreline? Would you like to see it protected for future generations?

Through the Government of Canada's Ecological Gifts Program, landowners can donate their land, or a partial interest, to an eligible recipient organization that will care for it forever, such as a land trust, environmental charity, or government.

In addition to peace of mind, donors can receive significant income tax benefits, including elimination of any tax on the capital gain.

For more information,
visit the Ecological Gifts Program website at www.canada.ca/ecological-gifts or call 1-800-668-6767.

Les dons écologiques :

un don pour l'avenir, des avantages fiscaux aujourd'hui

Possédez-vous une terre comprenant des habitats naturels comme des forêts, des prairies, des milieux humides ou côtiers? Aimeriez-vous qu'elle soit protégée pour les générations à venir?

Le Programme des dons écologiques du gouvernement du Canada permet aux propriétaires fonciers de faire don de leur propriété, ou d'un intérêt partiel, à un bénéficiaire admissible qui en prendra soin à perpétuité, comme une fiducie foncière, un organisme de bienfaisance environnemental ou un gouvernement.

En plus de la tranquillité d'esprit, les donateurs peuvent bénéficier d'avantages fiscaux importants, y compris l'élimination de l'impôt sur le gain en capital.

Pour plus d'information, visitez le site du Programme des dons écologiques à www.canada.ca/dons-ecologiques ou appelez au 1-800-668-6767.

Contribute to Indigenous Cultural Vitality

First Peoples' Cultural Foundation is an Indigenous-led charitable organization dedicated to building a future in which Indigenous languages are thriving and cultural systems are strong and vibrant. Since 2000, we have provided grant funding and resources to Indigenous people and communities, cultural and educational organizations, artists, heritage experts, Knowledge Keepers, language learners and teachers to support their cultural revitalization efforts.

In Canada, research on Indigenous language revitalization shows that, even with sufficient government interventions and under ideal conditions, the process of stabilizing a threatened language can take decades. The timelines for revitalizing arts and cultural heritage are even longer. We know that sustainable, long-term investments into Indigenous cultural revitalization will yield many benefits – in terms of economic development, self-determination and self-governance, health and wellness, and environmental protection for all.

By contributing to First Peoples' Cultural Foundation you are taking part in transformational, long term change for communities across these lands.
